Court Witness Says Group Frequently Visited Her Home.

TRUE SAYS EX-GATEMAN

Publication in "The Republican" that Rockview convicts received passes from Supt. Stutsman enabling them to leave the stockade and roam at will over the 5000 acres of prison lands, and in some instances to go beyond the prison boundaries, has received confirmation from two sources.

Grace Page, residing nearby the prison lands, swore while a witness in Court last Thursday, that it was a common practice for convicts to come to her home at night, and that they had been doing so "for some time." She could not testify whether the convicts in question possessed passes, or had slipped out and back under cover of darkness. She did testify, however, to the frequency of such visits.

"Mickey" Rodgers and Frank Seaman were named off-hand by her, in addition to John Walk, as convicts who frequently visited and spent several hours at a time at the Page home. There were others, she testified, but could not identify them by name.

James Litz, the gate-keeper dismissed some time ago by Supt. Stutsman, has also confirmed "The Republican" article, stating that he is willing to make affidavit to the facts.

"What the Page girl swore to in Court is true," said Mr. Litz to "The Republican."

"Convicts had passes from Mr. Stutsman permitting them to leave the prison grounds," continued Mr. Litz. "On a number of nights while I was at the gate convicts went out because they had passes from Mr. Stutsman. Sometimes they wouldn't get back until midnight, and once or twice they did not get in until 2 o'clock in the morning. Sometimes they drove out at night with a horse and buggy. We all had our idea as to where they went at night when they had passes, but personally I never knew. I am willing to make affidavit that I saw this take place while I was at the gate."

The experience of John Walk, as an escaped convict, was not only unique but humorous. Most escaped convicts waste no time in getting as far away from Rockview as possible. Walk was an exception. From what may be learned, he ventered only as far as the Page home. There he remained in hiding during the day. At night he boldly returned to the prison grounds where another convict generously supplied him with food, after which Walk would go back to the Page home. This he continued to do for a number of nights.

During Supt. Stutsman's management, Rockview convicts have been permitted to have money in their possession. Sometimes they have received money as a gift, and at other times they have stopped passing motorists and sold beadwork, etc. They used the money as they pleased. Occasionally they purchased articles from passing trucks. In one instance, it is said, a convict had a good laugh over the fact that he had passed a counterfeit half dollar for some article he had purchased from a Bellefonte bakery delivery truck.

Under the former management at Rockview, it was considered a dangerous practice to permit convicts to have money. It was strictly forbidden. One of the reasons for such a strict rule was that a convict who escaped, and who had money in his possession, would be enabled to buy a railroad ticket and get far away before the officers could pick up his trail.

Before Supt. Stutsman took charge convicts were permitted to receive money, but they couldn't have possession of it. The money was forwarded to Pittsburgh and credited to the convict's account. If he desired to purchase articles such as underwear, or perhaps tobacco in addition to the quantity rationed to him, he signed a requisition for such purchase and it was sent to Pittsburgh, where a check covering the amount was issued and the convict charged accordingly. Any balance due the convict at the time of his discharge was turned over to him when he completed his sentence. Twice a year these accounts were audited by a committee representing the convicts to guard against any question as to accuracy, etc. Permitting convicts to receive and retain money is a part of Supt. Stutsman's "Golden Rule" system at Rockview.

KEYSTONE WOULD BOOST BORO. LIGHT 43 PER CENT.

Propose Increasing Yearly Cost from $4938.84 to $7034.

WANT 10YR. CONTRACT

A stormy session of Council was held on Monday evening by the borough dads because, in the opinion of a number of them, the Keystone Power Corporation attempted to hold them up, figuratively speaking.

The Keystone Corporation informed them, they said, that it had been furnishing light to the borough at a loss for some time and is unable to do so any longer. Since the borough's contract with the company expired last October, they are now in a position to make such statements and, so say the councilmen, "get away with it." The rental paid the Keystone Power Corporation in the past for light and the keeping in repair the street lighting system has been $4,938 84 per annum. This sum, says the corporation, is insufficient, and in turn offered the following 4 propositions, all of which are based on a 10-bear contract:

1. The Keystone Power Corporation will furnish light on the same system with the same number of street lights, for the sum of $5,723 per year. The borough to be required to look after the cleaning and upkeep of the lights.

2. The corporation will furnish current and keep the lights in repair for the sum of $7,034 per year.

3. The corporation will buy the street lighting system from the borough, install a new type of street lamp (lantern type with reflectors), furnish current and keep it in repair for $7,994 per year.

4. The borough to retain ownership of the system and for the same sum (7,994) the corporation will install 10 additional lights in the borough in addition to furnishing current and keeping the system in repair.

The ill feeling aroused by this action on the part of the Keystone Corporation is more easily understood, when the fact that assurances were given Council not long ago, so members explain, that the corporation would furnish the borough better service at less cost than before. The matter was finally laid aside for further consideration and other business of Council taken up.

A letter from N. A. Staples, of the local State Highway office, was read, stating that the State trucks could not oil the streets in the future as they have done in the past. The law provides that the State is required to oil only the state highway where it lies within the borough limits. He gave the names and addresses of several companies who do this work and suggested that in the future several boroughs in the county might combine and thus get their oiling done more cheaply. A bill from the state highway for $91.10, which represents 10% of the upkeep cost of Allegheny and Linn Sts. by the State, portions of these streets being kept up by the highway department as a part of the state highway.

The Water Committee reported the collection of $599,03 on the 1923 water duplicate, and $750 rent for the building occupied by the G. F. Musser Co. A discussion arose at this point as to whether or not this is a sufficient sum for the annual rental of the building. The general concensus of opinion seemed to be that it was not and that the rent should be raised. $3,490.50 represents the amount by which the collections from water meters in 1924 exceed collections in 1923.

The frame of the building which houses the Phoenix pumping station was reported to be in bad condition. It was stated that nothing could be done to repair this until spring, so the matter was held over.

The Finance Committee reported the sum of $5,400 due in notes. Authority for renewal was granted. Also the sum of $3,684.52 received from James D. Seibert, borough manager, during the year of 1924.

Robert Kline was re-appointed Fire Marshal for the coming year. The names of the following men were submitted as drivers for the two fire companies: Logan—Jay Storch, Max Gamble, Robert Garman and Ellis Hines. Undine:—B. Doll, C. Saxion, R. Moerschbarger and George Carpeneto. All of the men were approved by Council.

A representative of the Moose Temple Theatre was present and requested permission to erect a new theatre sign on a post at the curb in front of the theatre after removal of the present sign. Referred to the Street Committee with power to act.

The new beacon lights recently placed at the busiest corners were discussed and it was generally agreed that on the panels which bear the word "stop," and consequently the most important ones, the letters are too small to be seen by motorists, especially at night. It was suggested that the secretary get in touch with the manufacturers and determine if a new panel bearing larger letters could not be secured. In the meantime officers will be on hand to enforce the new traffic ruling at all times.

A matter which was agitated some time ago, to the effect that owners of vacant lots should not be required to pay water taxes on the same, was discussed and it was finally agreed that the taxes on these lots should be materially reduced. The exact amount of the reduction has not been determined.

Now They're Locking 'Em up in Jail For Failure to Pay Taxes for 1922—3

If you are figuring at all on being locked up in a nice, warm jail, with three meals a day brought right to you, the present period of snow to shovel off the sidewalks, and snow drifts to plow through on the highways, would seem to be about the most propitious time one could possibly select.

Sheriff "Dick" Taylor sees to it that the jail is comfortable at all hours, and Mrs. Taylor supervises the cooking, and the fellows who are visiting there now say the meals can't be beat.

The way to get there has been made perfectly simple by none other than Herbert Auman, tax collector for Bellefonte.

All one has to do is to forget to pay his—or her—taxes for the year 1922 and 1923. Herbert will attend to the rest.

Herbert will not only attend to it, he is in reality attending to it, as several local citizens learned when on Monday they were committed to jail for failure to pay their taxes. A large group of others will learn of it, entirely aside from reading these paragraphs, if they continue to forget to pay.

Chief of Police Dukeman has the warrants. In language anything but soothing they point out that there is no time like the present for paying the amount set forth. The warrants say, most cold bloodedly, "pay or go to jail." Quite a number have viewed the matter in that light and avoided going to jail. Those who have viewed it otherwise have taken up their abode with Sheriff Taylor. Others seemingly are headed in that direction, even though they may not happen to know of it at the present moment. Chief Dukeman isn't particularly busy ferreting out crime just now, and he is becoming pretty busy hunting up the ones whose names appear on the warrants for delinquent taxes.

Its something new for Bellefonte, even though not necessarily pleasant. Some other sections of Centre County have experienced the novelty of arrests for failure to pay taxes, but Bellefonte joined the group only recently. It seems that the law gives the tax collector power to issue such warrants and also to sign commitments to jail. If you never knew that before, it might be well to recall the fact from now on, whenever you happen to pass Herbert Auman on the street. If you have paid your 1922 and 1923 taxes you are perfectly safe. But if you haven't and Herbert suddenly turns and pretends to be looking at something in a store window, its a three to one bet that he has just signed a warrant for you and that Chief Dukeman will be calling soon.

At that, Chief Dukeman is very accommodating. Even after picking you up, and marching you to jail, if you can think of somebody who may help out with a small loan, the Chief will give you a chance to go out and try to get the money. He has done that with a number. Some were able to get the money, but those who weren't were locked up. Of course, most persons when they get clear up to the jail door are able to think of some kind friend who might advance a small loan, and under the circumstances they are willing to try it, at least.

Once a delinquent tax payer is arrested and committed to jail, the tax collector's legal liability for the amount due ceases. Its the legal method for the tax collector to "pass the buck" to the County Commissioners. If the latter see fit to accept a note for the amount from a delinquent who hasn't a cent, and who is unable to borrow, they may do so. Sometimes they do, rather than put the County to the expense of boarding the delinquent. For merely serving time in jail doesn't pay the taxes. The delinquent is committed until he pays, and he must remain in jail until the Commissioners approve his discharge.

Now that they have suffrage, women are just as liable to be locked up as are the men. The fact that women refuse to vote does not lessen their liability for taxes. If they have no real estate on which to pay tax, they are liable anyhow for a housekeeper's tax, and they can be locked up for the latter just the same. Thus far Herbert Auman hasn't issued any warrants for women delinquents, although there are many on the list. He probably will put off that unpleasant duty until the very last minute, for he owes his election as tax collector largely to the women. Arresting anybody isn't the most popular thing a tax collector can do, by any means. Some men might get out and forget being arrested, but its a forty to one shot that any woman arrested and locked up in jail as a delinquent wouldn't vote for Herbert for anything in the future. Herbert is no novice in politics and it may be that he will run out of warrants before he reaches the women on his list. But no woman should take that as a safe tip from us. We might be missing our guess.

TRUST COMPANY PROSPERS

Present Officers and Directors Re-elected for Coming Year.

At the most successful stockholders meeting of the Bellefonte Trust Company on Tuesday, ever held in the history of that institution, 45 stockholders unanimously re-elected the present officers and directors for the coming year. The directors are as follows: J. L. Spangler, A. C. Mingle, W. J. Emerick, A. R. Mc Nitt, L. H. McMullin, J. L. Seibert, C. Y. Wagner, F. L. Wetzler, and N. E. Robb. The officers elected by the board of directors are as follows: J. L. Spangler, president; A. C. Mingle, vice-president; N. E. Robb, secretary & treasurer; Earl S. Orr, asst. secy. & treas; N. E. Robb, trust officer.

A splendid luncheon was served at noon at the Brockerhoff House, and in addition to the stockholders, members of the Centre County bar and a number of ministers were present. In a statement, N. E. Robb, said that the past year had been most successful, showing a marked increase in the bank's business, especially in the trust department.

Child Struck by Auto.

The first coasting accident to be reported this winter in Bellefonte happened on Tuesday evening when Henry Casper, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Casper, was struck by a car driven by Dr. John Sebring. The boy in company with several others, was coasting down the steep bank along Thomas St. opposite the P. R. R. freight station. Just as Dr. Sebring came along the lower road by the station the boy shot down the bank on his sled, directly into the car. Fortunately the wheel of the car did not pass over his body and his only injuries were a number of painful lacerations and bruises. His clothes were considerably torn and he suffered more or less pain, but no complications have arisen and he is now well on the road to recovery.

Coal Case Continued.

Owing to the illness of Judge Baird, of Clinton County, the hearing scheduled for Monday, at Lock Haven, on a petition for a receiver for the Blanchard—Moshannon Coal Co. was continued. Judge Baird has been ill for several weeks.

READY FOR DEDICATION

Interesting Program at Evangelical S. S. Next Sunday.

As announced in last week's issue of "The Republican" the new Sunday School room of the Evangelical Church of Bellefonte will be dedicated on Sunday, January 25th., by Bishop S. C. Breyfogel, the following being the program:

Sunday School at 9:15, preaching services by the Bishop at 10:00 A. M., and at 7:00 P. M.

A platform meeting will be held on Sunday afternoon, at which a number of prominent speakers will be present. There will also be services every night following the dedication by former pastors of the Bellefonte church.

Juvenile Court.

Two cases were presented before Judge Dale at a session of Juvenile Court last Friday afternoon. They were: Mary Balash, of Snow Shoe, a 14 year old girl, declared by her parents to be incorrigible. She had run away from home and had been employed as a maid in several Bellefonte homes. She was sent to Glen Mills. The other case was that of Austin Keith, a 14 year old boy who had been "bound out" to work on a farm near Zion. He had run away several times. He was paroled in the custody of the Juvenile Court Officer, who turned him over to Mr. White, a farmer near AxeMann, who volunteered to look after him.

MAY SELECT HOY FARM FOR AIRMAIL STATION

Decision Said to Rest Between That and Site Near Zion.

IS UP TO WASHINGTON

Bellefonte's new aviation field which is to be specially equipped for night flying, may be located on the Sinie H. Hoy farm, about two miles south of town.

The proposed site is a square plot of about 50 acres, very level, and considered to be exceptionally free from fog. It is said to meet the requirements of sufficient length and breadth for four-way flying.

There has been nothing definite done in the selection of a site. In fact, there are some who profess to believe that the new location will be nearby Zion.

The selection of the Hoy farm would necessitate relocation by the Keystone Power Corporation of its high tension power lines running diagonally through the 50 acre field in question. The construction of the power line resulted in a law suit against the company and a verdict for Mr. Hoy in excess of the amount offered him. The matter is still in litigation. Testimony has been taken and argument will be heard on an appeal by the company for a new trial.

With matters in this shape, the company has taken up with Mr. Hoy the matter of relocating the power line, as he first desired. If the company is finally compelled to pay him the amount awarded by a jury in Court, settlements with other farmers in that locality for damages would probably have to be made on a like basis. This the company is naturally desirous of avoiding, if possible.

The Hoy farm was one of several prospective sites inspected last week by J. F. Whitbeck, of the eastern airmail division. Mr. Hoy has informed "The Republican" that no direct offer has been made to him for renting the site in question.

SPECIAL COURT

Judge Dale Disposed of Numerous Prisoners Pleading Guilty.

At a special session of Court held last Thursday, Judge Dale disposed of pleas of guilty, as follows:

John Walk, of Luzerne County, pleaded guilty to escaping from Rockview and was given a new term of 1½ to 3 years. He still has a year on his old sentence.

James H. Ryan pleaded guilty to statutory offense and was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs of prosecution and undergo imprisonment in the county jail for 15 days. Mr. Gettig, counsel for the defendant, explained to Judge Dale that a jail sentence could not be imposed for such an offense, whereupon the Court changed the sentence to a fine of $10 and costs.

Homer Johnson, of Philipsburg, pleaded guilty to a serious offense and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs of prosecution.

James Leitzel, of Philipsburg, pleaded guilty to failure to pay a board bill of $10. Sentence suspended for 3 months on condition that he pay the bill and costs.

John Hart, of Philipsburg, pleading guilty to possessing and transporting liquor, was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs.

Grace Page, of Rock Forge, charged with harboring, aiding and abetting John Walk, who escaped from Rockview. According to prison officials, Walk had been staying at the Page home at Rock Forge for a week before his capture. The Court suspended sentence.

William Confer and Boyd Musser, of Gregg Township, pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and larceny. The charge was to the effect that they had broken into a tool house of the P. R. R. and had stolen several pairs of rubber boots. Confer was sent to Huntingdon, while Musser was committed to the county jail for 6 months.

Walter and Della Yonick, of Spike Island, Rush Township, were charged with violation of the liquor laws. The former was fined $50, with 3 months in jail. Sentence was suspended on his wife.

John and Helen Grobinsky and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Unick, taken in the same raid, also pleaded guilty. The two men were given 3 months in jail. Grobinsky was fined $50 and Unick $100.

Mrs. Ed. Gravish, also of Spike Island, was fined $100, and sentenced to 2 months in jail. She is the mother of 3 children, the oldest of whice is 10 years.

COL. SHOEMAKER ATTACKS CROSS-BREEDING DEER

Fears Methods of State Game Commission Defeat Purpose.

SEES 'NATURE REVENGE'

A sharp controversy has arisen between members of the State Forestry Commission and the State Game Commission relative to the merits of recent cross-breeding of deer and various bounty laws to encourage destruction of predatory type animals. Big game hunters in Centre County are particularly interested in the discussion of cross-breeding of deer and its probable bearing on hunting prospects in future years.

Col. Henry W. Shoemaker, of McElhattan, has opened the attack on the State Game Commission's methods which are, of course, aimed to increase the number of deer in Pennsylvania mountains and thereby improve hunting conditions. Col. Shoemaker, first conceding that cross-breeding has increased the number of deer, contends that the original big deer of Pennsylvania is gone and that its place is taken by a "mongrel of the meanest type" which is the result of cross breeding of various kinds of deer imported from other states. These deer have increased, he said, but the offspring shows deterioration in size and in stamina, due to crossing of strains and subjection to unfamiliar climatic conditions. The reason that does are barren is not because they outnumber the bucks, but because nature has revenged herself on them, he said.

Concerning the large kill of bears this year, Col. Shoemaker says that if the figures are true more are being killed than are born each year. He said that changed conditions have changed the habits of the bear and they are more easily found and killed. Were steel traps and deadfalls still permitted, they would soon be extinct, he declared.

Col. Shoemaker maintains that the destruction of predatory type animals, commonly called vermin, destroys the balance of nature, and permits the unfit animals, which, being more readily caught would constitute the prey of these animals, to breed and perpetuate their kind, with the result that the breed of animals and birds is deteriorating and the present wild life is of a type which is lacking in the stamina to withstand hardships incident to food scarcity, severe winters or wet springs. He advocates doing away with bounty laws and keeping the predatory animals in order to preserve "the balance of nature."

Dr. H. J. Donaldson, of the State Game Commission, answering Col. Shoemaker, claims that the latter's theories were sound in years gone by, but that their time is past. The scheme of nature has changed in Pennsylvania since the disappearance of the forests and the increase in human inhabitants, he said.

His chief argument is that the "balance of nature" exists only when wild life is subjected to no other source of destruction. The 600,000 hunters in Pennsylvania have destroyed this balance, he said, as the forces of destruction, represented by the hunters and by the predatory animals which hunt every day, are greater than wild life is fitted to overcome. The "balances" can only be restored by killing off the "vermin" and thus lessening the odds against game.

The questions raised and the merits of the entire policy of the State Game Commission, will arouse interest among hunters generally and in all probability will receive attention from the Legislature. The one hope upon which all agree is that whatever result is effected will be for the permanent betterment of hunting and wild life conditions.

WARNING!

Scientists have issued to all observers in the path of the eclipse next Saturday a caution as follows:

Do not look directly at the sun, even when it is a narrow crescent, without protecting the eyes with a dark glass or dark green celluloid shade. Above all, do not use field glasses or telescopes without proper protection to the eyes.

Failure to heed this warning may result in serious injury to the eye—even blindness.

Sailless Sailing Ship For Future

New Invention Relies on Air for Power.

Berlin.—The sailing vessel of the future will be without sails if the new invention of Dr. Anton Flettner, known as the Flettner rotor, proves to be all that is claimed for it.

Instead of wooden masts, rigging and sails, the new equipment will consist only of metal masts, resembling smokestacks, revolved on their axis by a motor. Experiments with a 650-ton hull, fitted as above set forth, have shown that with one-fifth of the weight of the customary masts and sails the rotor ship can develop 15 times the wind power of the ordinary sailing vessel. The rotor ship does not have to be hauled out of the harbor by a tug—it starts the minute the cylinders, driven by a small Diesel motor, begin to rotate. This motor can be handled by one person on the bridge, and all the crew formerly necessary for sailing can be dispensed with. From an economic standpoint the inventor claims that from 30 to 80 per cent can be saved on fuel if the rotor device is installed.

The Hamburg-American line has ordered the construction of a 10-000-ton freighter which is to sail with rotors instead of sails, and the whole shipping world is inquiring into the adaptability of the invention to passenger ships.

The principle on which the new ship operates has been explained by Herr Freudenberg, Doctor Flettner's right-hand man, as follows:

Air Course Studied.

"Supposing a current of air strikes a smooth cylinder, such as a smokestack or the cylinder of our rotor, what will happen? The air will pass to the right and to the left of the cylinder about evenly. Now suppose one-half of the cylinder were covered with some rough surface, such as sandpaper, what would happen? The air current, following the lines of least resistance, would pass off toward the smooth side and only very little of it toward the roughened side.

"In other words, the air current will go where there is least resistance to it. Suppose next that we begin to turn the smooth cylinder by some mechanical means, such as an electric motor. As it revolves, one side of it, the disappearing side as you look at it from the front, will be moving in the same direction in which the air current is moving, while the other side will run counter to the air current. Naturally the air, following the lines of least resistance, will pass off toward the side where the cylinder turns with the wind.

"It follows that if the cylinder is turned faster than the velocity of the wind there is absolutely no friction on the one side for the air, and the whole current will be deflected to that one side with such vehemence and with such crowding together of current that suction ensues on the side revolving with the wind, while on the side coming up against the wind a pressure against the cylinder is produced.

"This combination of suction on one side of the cylinder and of pressure on the other forces the ship forward and sails can be dispensed with."

Steel Supports Cylinders.

The revolving or rotating cylinders are mounted on strong masts of steel. In the case of the experimental ship, the Buckau, the steel masts projected above the deck for a distance of 40 feet, while the cylinders which are set upon the pivotal masts, like hoods, were 25 feet higher. They revolve about the pivots on ball bearings and turn noiselessly. The motor, using only 2 per cent of the power that would be needed to drive the ship with a propeller, can turn the cylinders at the rate of about 110 revolutions a minute. In the case of a sailing vessel therefore 98 per cent of the power is produced by the wind acting upon the cylinders, while only 2 per cent is contributed by the small motor that one person can attend to.

The rotor ship can be made to reverse its direction by merely reversing the motor. To turn the boat about, one cylinder is made to turn in one direction and the other in the opposite, just as in rowing one turns by pulling at one oar and pushing the other.

The fact that the changes of speed or the reversing of the motor can be done instantaneously, makes it possible for the new ship to ride a storm quite as easily as it moves in clear weather.

The Flettner people look upon the rotor ship as a mere beginning along the road of gaining energy from the air. Some day the wind may be giving us heat, light and power, Doctor Flettner observes. He is therefore at work on the construction of a windmill or wind tower which, if perfected, will mean that the American farmer can reduce his coal bill to a minimum, and take energy out of the air. It will mean, the inventor declares, that flying across the ocean will become a simple thing, for instead of running the risk of getting out of fuel the aviator will draw his energy from the wind.

Raise $100,000 Fund for Sulgrave Manor

New York.—The ancestral home in England of George Washington, Sulgrave manor, in Northamptonshire, will henceforth be maintained and preserved by the income of a fund of $100,000 raised in this country by the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America.

Mrs. John R. Lamar, national president of the society, explained that the organization was directed, under the terms of its constitution, to preserve and restore buildings connected with the early history of the United States. Before the World war it sent $3,000 to England to restore the manor.

The greater part of the $100,000 was given by the dames themselves, but generous aid was also received from the public. Not a dollar has been deducted from the subscriptions on account of collection expenses, all of which were paid by the societies or by individual dames.

Meteorite Is Memorial for Heroes of War

Beatrice, Neb.—A gigantic stone, weighing many tons, said to be a fallen meteor, according to the stories told by old settlers of the vicinity, has been removed from its earthly bed, south of the city, and placed in the city park. Sixteen horses and two weeks' time were required to transport the stone half a mile to the park.

It will be used as a memorial to those who gave their lives in the World war. Their names, engraved in a bronze tablet, will be set in the stone.

Snow Worms Bore Into Glaciers Like Hot Wire

Seattle, Wash.—Snow worms have been found in the Cascade mountains of Washington and on glaciers and mountains in Alaska, Trevor Kincaid, professor of zoology in the University of Washington, declared after an investigation.

"The snow or ice worm is not really pink as many assert, but is more of a brownish hue," said Professor Kincaid. "The brown pigment in its skin is a source of heat which enables the worm to bore its way through glacier ice like a heated wire. It grows to a length of about an inch, feeding on debris in the ice."

One Hundred Short

By JACK WOODFORD

(© by Western Newspaper Union.)

THINGS were at a pretty pass at the State Street National bank.

Franklin Heath, the president, and Ed Connors, head of a local detective agency, sat discussing the situation.

"It's plainly up to you, Ed," reminded the president impatiently.

Connors' face colored. Finally the operative whirled about and addressed the president:

"Last night I personally watched your paying teller, Hargraves, balance his currency—it was O. K. I watched every move he made between his cage and the value—nothing could possibly have been taken out of it; yet, he is one hundred dollars short again today! Five times in the last month that has happened—and the worst part of it is that it only has once more to happen and then my chances of ever solving the mystery here are gone forever."

"What makes you think it will not happen more than six times?"

"Just this: your bank has not been the only one victimized. For the past year reports have been coming in showing that someone is making a systematic cleanup. It is always the paying teller's cage they strike at, and never for over a hundred at a time. The teller finds himself short six different times, always within the period of thirty days or less. After the sixth hundred has vanished the losses stop.

They were interrupted at this juncture by a polite tap upon the door.

"Come in," called President Heath. A tall, slim, blue eyed-youth stepped quietly into the room.

"I beg your pardon," began Hargraves politely. "If you are busy—I thought that you were alone in here, else—"

"What is it in reference to, Hargraves," prompted the president.

"Why, the strange disappearance of currency from my cage—"

"You may speak freely; Mr. Connors here, is as anxious to solve the mystery as you or I."

"I had thought that perhaps you would discuss the matter alone with me, Mr. Heath," replied Hargraves.

"The matter of reward for the apprehension of the thief and the showing up of his methods; you see, naturally, the officer here would expect . . ."

"Listen here, son," broke in Connors, "if you nail this bird, I'll not only pass the reward on to you—and altogether I think it approximates some four thousand dollars—but I'll add a hundred of my own."

"And I'll do better than that. If you are smart enough to catch the man who's been doing this thing and discover his methods, I'll not only guarantee you a good raise, but promise you the first thing in the line of advancement that opens up around here." The clerk's face brightened.

"I hope you gentlemen won't think me wholly mercenary; but, you see, I was thinking of getting married and . . . well—to make a long story short, I have already caught the thief!"

"There wasn't anything hard about it," went on Hargraves, apologetically; "you see, I have an exceptionally good memory. If Mr. Connors will stand by my window for the first hour or so, after we open tomorrow, I'm sure the man will come in. The next morning, at a quarter of eleven, Connors, noting the movement of the hand to hair by Hargraves, the movement which, by prearrangement had been agreed upon as a signal, quietly walked up and snapped a bracelet upon the man's wrist as he received the money for a check he had just cashed. Another clerk relieved Hargraves, and they all adjourned to the president's office.

The prisoner, one Mr. Henry W. Southmore, addressed the president in an excess of purple rage.

"Mr. Heath, what the devil does this mean?" A little puzzled, Mr. Heath turned to the thoroughly confident Hargraves.

"Surely there must be some mistake; why, I opened this man's account here myself. He was well recommended; our dealings with him have been highly satisfactory—what evidence have you of your contentions?" Young Hargraves looked down at the check which he held in his hand.

"You just lay this check in front of you on your desk and watch it disappear," he smiled. The detective and the banker eyed the clerk as though he were demented.

"Will you please explain yourself," ordered the banker ominously.

"Sure," agreed Hargraves easily. "I have an excellent memory. The first time I ran my checks on the adding machine, after the first hundred shortage, I thought that I had missed one of this man's checks. The second time I got the notion that I had lost one of his checks. I decided that my memory couldn't have played me false two times in succession, and when he came the next time I laid his check aside to be sure that I would remember it. When I went to get it, in the afternoon at closing time, there was no check there—merely a blank piece of paper. Not only had the writing upon it vanished, but even in forming the printed check itself, he used sympathetic ink. It's a darn shame to spoil such a beautiful scheme, but I want to get married pretty bad."

"Don't forget to take his fountain pen as evidence," reminded Hargraves with a grin, and hustle along the reward check—remember, I have an excellent memory."

Radio Saves Life of Engineer at Sea

Seattle, Wash.—Taken ill in mid-ocean, Earl O'Brien, chief engineer of the Wawalona, owes his life to the radio and a ship's surgeon.

The engineer was suddenly stricken with appendicitis and the steamship President Jefferson was informed of his condition. The latter altered her course to meet the Wawalona. The engineer was transferred to the big ship, where the surgeon immediately performed the operation.

O'Brien is improving and will reach this port on the return trip of the Jefferson.

MAD MAID SLAYS MAN WITH AX

Declares God Told Her to Kill Family.

Plainfield, N. J.—Attributing her crime to God's will, Mary Kumsiak, a Polish domestic, murdered her employer, George H. Davey, an accountant, with an ax, as he slept in his home here. Mumbling the Lord's name, she then stole into the adjoining room of his wife, slashed her and struck the couple's twelve-year-old daughter. She remained in the room until the police carried her away in a straight-jacket.

Mrs. Davey, a sufferer from heart disease, is in a critical condition, with five deep gashes in her chest and throat. Little hope is held for her recovery. Winifred, the child, is not seriously hurt. It was she who spread the alarm.

The house was sleeping, when, early in the morning, Mary tiptoed down the three flights of steps to the cellar, where she secured a short handled ax with a long, sharp blade. She entered Davey's room. Five times she hacked her employer's throat and chest.

His first groans awakened his wife.

"Get up and see if daddy is all right," she told her daughter.

Winifred did as she was told. Brushing the little girl aside with the weapon, inflicting slight abrasions, the maid walked into the room where Mrs. Davey was now sitting up in bed, frightened.

"What's the matter? Are you frightened, Mary?" she asked.

The maid did not answer, but crept up to Mrs. Davey's bed. Mrs. Davey cried out, but her screams were suddenly terminated by a sharp blow against her throat. Mary raised the ax again and again, hacking the woman three times on the upper part of her body and once on her ankle, the force of the blow almost severing her foot.

The daughter rushed down the stairs and telephoned to police headquarters.

"God told me to kill them all," the maid cried out as the officers came.

"Identified" on Dead Phone; Gets $250

St. Louis.—Police have been asked by the Mermod, Jaccard & King Jewelry company to assist in the search for a stylish stranger calling himself W. H. Robinson of Chicago, who departed from their establishment with a watch, leaving in return for it a $250 draft on a New York bank, which has proved worthless.

He mentioned a well-known Webster Groves family, to whom he said he was closely related. A store employee called the telephone number Robinson gave, the customer reached for the phone, saying he would do the talking. He had just dropped down from Chicago; Aunt Martha was fine; brother was still in Europe; was their little Benjamin fully recovered from his measles? Then, in an offhand way, he mentioned that he was then selecting a watch, and the jewelers had expressed some hesitancy in accepting his draft.

The salesman had recognized the family called as reference, and the watch was given Robinson.

When the draft was returned unhonored, a second call was placed for Webster Groves. The man who had called them Monday? Why, yes, they remembered and had thought him drunk or insane and had cut off the connection and allowed the spurious nephew to talk to a dead wire for perhaps five minutes.

Widow Starves Self to Death in Her Grief

New York.—The death of Mrs. Florence Dunstan, thirty-six years old, in St. John's hospital, Long Island City, from gastro-enteritis, was attributed by her friends to self-starvation. It had been necessary to feed her forcibly for eleven months.

She had been trying for almost a year, relatives said, to starve herself to death because of her grief for her husband, Eugene, who died December 22.

They had been married nine years and the idea of Christmas without her husband affected Mrs. Dunstan so profoundly that from that day it was impossible to persuade her to take food voluntarily.

In spite of her resistance, nourishment was administered and her life was prolonged. She failed progressively in strength and health, however, and was taken to the hospital last month. Physicians there were unable to do more than to continue forcible feeding.

Stop That Cough!

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—"My oldest boy always had bronchial trouble from the time he was a little baby. The least cold would settle in his bronchial tubes and cause him to have a cough. He would fill up with phlegm and choke. I gave him medicine but nothing relieved him of this condition until I gave him Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and after giving him this medicine he got along fine. He has never had another spell of bronchial trouble."—Mrs. John Cronk, 187 Union St.

Three generations of Resinol Soap users in this family

Long Beach, Cal., June 23:—"I wonder if you would care for this unsolicited testimonial. I began using Resinol Soap many years ago with my first baby. He and his wife are now using it for my two-year-old grandchild.

I have also two married daughters using it and one more daughter at home with the heaviest curly bobbed hair I ever saw. All my life people have asked what I used to make the children's hair so beautiful and to give them such clear, healthy complexions. I have had only two rules: Resinol Soap and good plain food.

You have one good booster here in the west not only for California but for the Resinol products." (Signed) Annie L. Brown, 1042 E. 16th St.

SUFFERED AFTER BIRTH OF BABY

Trouble Caused by Getting Up Too Soon. Relieved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Talcville, New York.—"I thought it would interest you to know what benefit I have derived from taking your medicine. A few days after the birth of my third child I got up too quick. Then just before my fifth child was born I had inflammation of the bladder and displacement. Seeing your advertisement in a Liverpool (England) paper I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and that was the best confinement I had. Whenever I feel rundown I always take the Vegetable Compound as a tonic. We have just removed from Brockville (Canada) so I was pleased when the store ordered the medicine for me and I got it today. I would not be without it for any price and I recommend it to ladies around here because I feel so sure it will benefit any woman who takes it."—Mrs. AGNES WIGNALL, Talcville, New York.

Prominent People

Advance Opinions by Supreme Court?

James M. Beck, solicitor general of the United States, speaking as guest of honor at a recent Pennsylvania society dinner in New York on "The Problem of the Supreme Court," suggested it would be in the interest of public policy for the country's highest tribunal of justice to give advisory opinions in advance of litigation under certain conditions.

His proposal was that when congress by a joint resolution signed by the President should request from the Supreme court an advisory opinion on proposed legislation, the constitutionality of which is in doubt, the court should comply. He said the court's power to refuse such aid cannot be questioned and it must be left to the discretion of the justices whether they would comply with the request of congress. Aid should not be declined, he said, when a clear question of the power of congress to do a certain thing was involved in a concrete case and the proposed law was not a political issue in the partisan sense.

He did not suggest any new law to accomplish this result and cited an instance of 100 years ago, when President Monroe asked the Supreme court for advice as to the power of the federal government to make appropriations to be expended wholly within one state. The court, he said, for the first and only time in its history, authorized one of the justices to advise the President as to its opinion, which in this case was favorable.

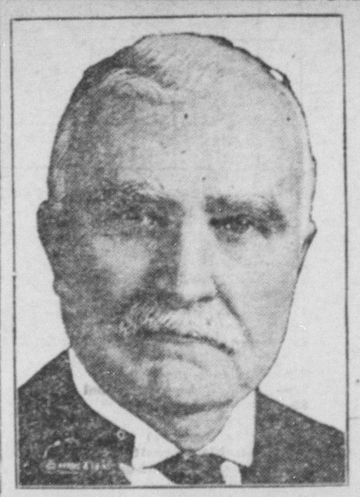
Woodrow Wilson Peace Award to Cecil

Before a distinguished gathering, which included Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Viscount Cecil of Chelwood was presented the other night with the $25,000 peace award and medal given under the Woodrow Wilson foundation for meritorious service in the cause of international co-operation and peace. The presentation was made at a dinner at which Norman H. Davis presided.

In accepting the award, Viscount Cecil asserted that the advance in the last five years in the direction of international co-operation had been "little short of marvelous." Praising the United States for having consistently stood for peace, Viscount Cecil said that he would not utter a word of criticism of the attitude of America toward the League of Nations. He stressed, however, the accomplishments of the league since its inception under the leadership of Woodrow Wilson, whom he characterized as "a great American and a great citizen of the world."

Disarmament, Viscount Cecil said, was one of the outstanding problems yet to be solved. He praised the work of the Washington conference, but said there remained to be dealt with the "rest of the naval problem, cruisers and submarines, and the whole of the land and air forces of the world."

Bruce and Harrison Clash in Senate



Senator Bruce of Maryland (portrait herewith) and Senator Harrison of Mississippi, both Democrats, had a spectacular clash on the floor of the senate the other day over the 1924 election, the specific point at issue being whether or not the country has lost confidence in the Democratic party, as now organized and managed. Senator Bruce asserted that the Democratic party had discarded ancient American ideals and had strayed in the direction of Wisconsin, Nebraska and North Dakota. What happened on November 4 last was the result, he added.

Senator Harrison, replying to the Marylander, almost charged him with disloyalty to his party. Senator Bruce, he declared, had in the last session of congress given aid and succor to the administration Republicans by supporting the Mellon tax plan and with "assisting the leaders on the other side in thwarting our plans and our efforts to carry out our policies." It was nothing less than an exhibition of audacity, he exclaimed, for Mr. Bruce to rise in the senate and criticize his Democratic colleagues and his party.

In reply to the Mississippian the Marylander characterized Senator Harrison as a "narrow, contracted, small bore partisan," adding that he had no apologies to make for his past activities in the senate or his lifelong record as a Democrat. He was voting the Democratic ticket, he remarked, before Senator Harrison was born. What he wanted, he added, was a party that would continue true to the policies of Jefferson and Grover Cleveland.

How Fares It With Comrade Trotzky?

What's happening to Leon Trotzky, war minister of Soviet Russia, these days? All of the stories that are getting into print about him can't be true. Perhaps none of them are. It's a credulous man who believes what he reads about Russia these days. But Americans are more or less interested in Comrade Trotzky because he used to be here with us and because Grand Duchess Victoria Feodorovna, wife of Grand Duke Cyril Vladimirovitch, has just visited us and told us that her husband is to be "Czar Cyril I." And of course Comrade Trotzky must be pulled down from the saddle before Cyril can mount.

Is Comrade Trotzky still in the saddle? That's the question. He may be husky or dying or dead for all the American press knows. All stories agree on one first: that Trotzky is a storm center just now. It also seems likely that he is ill. But one story says he's a prisoner of his opponents in Moscow. Another says he's in "exile" in the Caucasus. A third has it that he's back from the Caucasus and in control of things in Moscow.

Anyway, it appears certain that Comrade Trotzky has written a book, "Lessons of the 1917 Revolution." So all his opponents are attacking the book savagely—and incidentally its author.

OPERATION AND CARE OF SEWING MACHINE

Holding School on Care of Sewing Machine.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A suggestion may be borrowed by any housekeeper from the fact that in New York state more than a thousand farm women have taken advantage of the one-day schools on the care of sewing machines held by the department of rural engineering of the New York State Agriculture college. A report received by the United States Department of Agriculture states that the schools are arranged by the local home bureau agent in each country, and are planned to have about fifteen women each.

Concentrated Instruction.

Every school begins promptly at ten o'clock in the morning and if only a few women are present they get the privilege of concentrated instruction. About 90 per cent of sewing machine trouble is due to dirt in the machine, and many a backache has been removed when the women got rid of gum, oil, fluff, loose threads, and other impediments to the easy running of their machines. Every forenoon of the school is given up to cleaning the machines, which means removing all the dirt from the bearings, usually by means of a stiff brush and gasoline. Aged, decrepit and ailing machines have had many of their ailments removed by the cleaning.

The afternoon is spent with fundamentals, such as the adjustment of the tension, which is the second great source of sewing machine trouble. In the majority of cases either the upper or lower tension is too tight, and the women are told to pull the cloth on a puckered seam to see whether the upper or lower thread pulls; the thread that breaks has the tightest tension.

Bring Their Machines.

The women come for miles around, bringing their machines by auto, wagons, wheelbarrows, baby carriages, and, in snowy weather, on hand sleds. One woman carried the head of her machine, that is, all above the stand and treadle, for 14 miles, walking all the way. This was in the hilly country of Ulster county. When the school was over she said she didn't mind walking back, but she hoped that somebody going in her direction might cart the machine for her, at least, part way. She got the lift back.

Counties are clamoring for this service, asking for daily extension schools. No machine comes to school unless something is the matter with it; and so far none has ever left the school without being in good running order.

POTATOES PREPARED IN DIFFERENT WAYS

Some Recipes Suggested by Way of a Change.

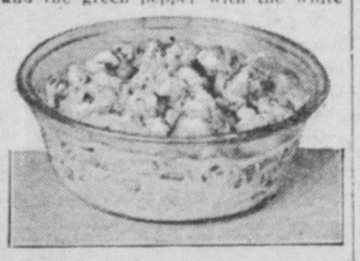
(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Potatoes may be prepared in such a variety of ways that the family need never tire of having them. The United States Department of Agriculture suggests some of the recipes below by way of a change:

Potatoes With Cheese and Green Pepper.

2 cupfuls diced cooked potatoes.
1 tablespoonful flour.
1 tablespoonful fat.
½ cupful milk.
1 teaspoonful salt.
¼ teaspoonful pepper.
1 green pepper cooked and chopped.
½ cupful grated American cheese.
½ cupful bread crumbs.

Make the sauce, using the fat, flour, milk and seasoning. Mix the potato and the green pepper with the white sauce and cheese. Put in a baking dish and cover with the bread crumbs and brown in a hot oven.



Potatoes Creamed With Carrots and Green Peppers.

Canned red pepper or pimiento can be used in place of the green pepper.

Potato Omelet.

1 cupful mashed potatoes.
¼ teaspoonful pepper.
3 eggs.
3 tablespoonfuls cream or milk.
1 teaspoonful salt.

Wash eggs, and separate the whites and yolks. Add the yolks to the potatoes and beat until there are no lumps. Season with onion juice, if desired, and chopped parsley. Beat the whites until stiff and fold into the potato mixture. Put into a well-greased frying pan and bake in oven until brown. Then turn and fold on hot platter. Serve at once.

Potato and Cheese Molds.

2 cupfuls mashed potatoes.
4 tablespoonfuls grated cheese.
2 tablespoonfuls fat
¼ cupful milk.
1 teaspoonful salt.

Melt fat in saucepan, add potatoes, and mix well; then add the milk and half the cheese and seasoning. Put into a greased baking dish, small ramekins, or baking cups, sprinkle the rest of the cheese on top and bake in a fairly quick oven about ten minutes.

Potato and Egg Mold.

3 cupfuls mashed potatoes
1 cupful egg sauce.

Mix the potatoes with the egg sauce and season. Put in baking dish or baking cups and bake until lightly browned. The egg sauce is made as follows:

Egg Sauce.

1 cupful milk.
½ tablespoonful potatoes.
1 tablespoonful fat.
Pepper.
Salt.
1 hard-boiled egg.

Make a cream sauce by mixing the potato starch with the melted fat, combining with the milk, and cooking until thickened. Add the finely chopped egg. If potato starch is not available, cornstarch may be used instead.

Potato and Nut Sausage.

2 cupfuls mashed potatoes.
½ pound nuts of any kind.
1 egg well beaten.
1½ teaspoonfuls salt.
¼ pound salt pork.
⅛ teaspoonful pepper.
Few grains cayenne.
Pinch celery seed.
½ cupful milk (approximately).

To the mashed potatoes add enough milk to bind them. Put nuts in boiling water to loosen skins, remove skins, and put nuts through meat grinder. Mix nuts and potatoes thoroughly and season well. Add well-beaten eggs to potato mixture. Form into sausages, flour them well, put into greased pan, and put a small piece of salt pork on top of each sausage. Bake in a fairly hot oven until brown (about forty-five minutes). Serve with tomato sauce.

Honey Useful in Making Fruit Salad Dressing

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Here is a salad dressing made with cream for those who do not like oil. The interesting point about it is the use of honey to make it slightly sweet for use on fruit salads. The recipe is furnished by the United States Department of Agriculture.

4 egg yolks.
2 tablespoonfuls vinegar or lemon juice.
2 tablespoonfuls butter.
2 tablespoonfuls honey.
1 teaspoonful mustard.
1 teaspoonful salt.
Paprika to taste.
1 cupful cream.

Heat the cream in a double boiler. Beat the eggs, and add to them all the other ingredients but the cream. Pour the cream slowly over the mixture, beating constantly. Pour it into the double boiler and cook until it thickens, or mix all the ingredients but the cream and cook in a double boiler until the mixture thickens. As the dressing is needed combine this mixture with whipped cream. This dressing is particularly suitable for fruit salad.

Milk for Children Best

There is more than an ounce of fat (at least two and one-half level tablespoonfuls) in a quart of whole milk. If the healthy child is given a quart of milk and has butter on his bread, he gets enough fat, and that which he receives is in wholesome form. It is well, therefore, the United States Department of Agriculture believes, not to give children such fatty foods as pastry, fried meats, doughnuts or rich cakes, as experience has shown that in these the fats are not in so good a form for them. If the child is constipated, the occasional use of cream or salad oil is desirable for fat in abundance is laxative.

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders from The Pennsylvania State College.

"WATERED STOCK"—Cows producing milk require water, lots of it. It is a good dairy practice to see that they get all that they want, at least twice a day. A cow does not like it iced, either. Warmed drinking water will show results in the milk pail.

HOUSE PLANTS-Now that there is nothing much to do with outdoor plants, it is well to give careful attention to the house plants. Water them when they need it and watch for red spiders. These pests can be routed by putting water on the leaves. Weak tobacco tea also turns the trick but unfortunately it stains white flowers.

DELICIOUS GREENS—Asparagus is a fine early green which should be in every garden. From 50 to 100 roots will be sufficient for a family of two to five people. Extension Leaflet No. 19, which is free for the asking, can be secured by writing to Pennsylvania State College, State College, Pa.

HATCHING EGGS—If hatching eggs are to be collected for early season incubation, it is time to place the breeding males in the pen. It is just as undesirable to use too many males as too few. The proper ratio is one male to 20 females for Leghorns and one male to 12 or 15 females in the case of American or dual purpose breeds.

BROOD SOWS—Are the brood sows getting plenty of exercise these winter days? Be sure that they also get sufficient protein and mineral matter to maintain their body weight and develop a good litter of pigs.

B. H. S. BASKET BALL

Local Boys Lose to Huntingdon but Defeated Mt Union.

Bellefonte High School playing on their hardest trip of the present season fought through to a victory over Mt. Union, last Saturday night, 25—21, but lost to Huntingdon High, 21—17, on Friday night. Both games were of the fiercest and most desperately contested of the season, even though hard games have been the rule.

Huntingdon was determined to win at any cost to even the football defeat handed to her this fall by the B. H. S. boys. The game was played very hard throughout the 40 minutes, especially the second half when the referee lost entire control of the game. From the sidelines the game looked like a five man football game.

Captain Emel led the Bellefonte attack in shooting and working the ball down the floor.

Saturday at Mt. Union the playing of both teams was of a much different calibre. The game was played very hard and was marred by only a few minutes of rough playing. Bellefonte led the Bricktown boys at half-time by the score of 19—9. The Mt Union team outplayed Bellefonte in the last half, scoring 12 points against the home team's 6. Bower was Bellefonte's one big threat in this game, particularly the first half when he caged four goals from the field. He scored 11 of Bellefonte's 25 points in the game. Herman scored three two-pointers the first half but was so completely covered the second half that it was impossible for him to get near the basket.

The Bellefonte boys administered the second trouncing of the season to the crack Lock Haven Five on the latter's floor on Tuesday evening. The score was 29 to 27. The game was hard-fought and fast throughout, as Lock Haven was trying hard to redeem themselves after the defeat administered several weeks ago in the local armory. A bus load of fans who journeyed down the valley to view the game spent practically the entire night on the road. Returning after the game they left Lock Haven at 10:30 in "Miss Nittany" and just 6 hours later, 4:30 A. M., to be exact, they reached Bellefonte, having bucked terrific snow drifts the entire distance.

This week B. H. S. plays Hollidaysburg on the Armory floor Saturday evening.

B. H S. GIRLS WIN

Defeat Philipsburg High 27 to 17 in Hard Fought Game.

In a game in which there was not a single let-up, not a slackening of spirit, and not a pause in hard playing, Bellefonte High School girls defeated the Philipsburg girls 27 to 17. The early part of the game looked as if it might develop into a runaway for the local sextet, but the girls from over the mountain returned relentlessly to the attack and time after time threatened the B. H. S. basket. Over-anxiety and the speed of the game caused some fouling. The determination of the visitors was maintained until the final whistle. Playing a hard, clean game they never forgot the ideals of sportsmanship.

This Friday evening at the Y. M. C. A. our girls will play the basketball team from Lock Haven High School. Be on hand at 8 o'clock.

OVER THE COUNTY

Dr. H. S. Braucht, of Spring Mills, who recently returned from Philadelphia where he underwent a serious operation, is again at work among his patients.

W. E. Weaver, of Aaronsburg has been admitted to the hardware firm of Hosterman & Stover at Millheim. The firm is now called the Hosterman & Stover Company.

Arrangements have been made to name a mountain in Centre County after Catherine Smith, who made gun barrels for the Continental army at the mouth of White Deer creek.

The recently elected officers of the K. G. E. lodge of Centre Hall are: Chas. E. Flink, Noble Chief; William Hannah, Vice Chief; Earl C. Lutz, High Priest, and W. H. Bland, Sir Herald.

The new Central Grammar School was recently opened at State College costing nearly $72,000. The building is 58x88 and contains 8 large rooms with the most modern equipment, in addition to several offices.

A special pension bill was recently passed and approved by congress and the president to provide $20 per month for Margaret Ulrich, helpless daughter of George Ulrich, a veteran of Millheim, deceased.

Members of the Woodward Gun Club held a meeting last week and took up the purchase of a site for a camp. Among those attending were Ellis Keller, Fred Reynolds, Jr., Hugh Quigley, and T. H. Harter, all of Bellefonte.

On February 11 "Grandmother" Sarah Bilger, Centre County's dean of women voters, will celebrate her ninety-fourth birthday anniversary at her home at Pleasant Gap. Mrs. Bilger is enjoying remarkably good health for one of her age, and is in possession of all her faculties. She expects to have all her children home for this occasion and insists on preparing the proposed big dinner herself.

ECLIPSE SATURDAY

Centre County in Radius to Witness Obscuring of Sun.

What scientists predict will be the most majestic and awe-inspiring spectacle that man can witness will be the total eclipse of the sun to occur Saturday morning January 24. No total eclipse of the sun has been visible in the northeastern part of the United States since 1806, nor will such an opportunity come again in this section of country until 2024. There will not be another similar eclipse in this part of the United States within the lifetime of those now living.

Centre County lies in the scope of the eclipse to a degree of over 98% of the total. The strip of totality is about a hundred miles wide and roughly speaking lies between New York City and the southern boundary of Massachusetts. It sweeps up from the Atlantic Ocean and in an arc passes through the upper edge of Northeast Pennsylvania, takes in a goodly portion of New York State and on up through Lake Huron and Lake Erie into Canada.

The phenomenon begins at 7.58 A. M. It comes on rapidly and by 8.15 the moon will be seen well encroaching on the dazzling disc. By 8.45 more than 50 per cent. of the eclipse will be on. The maximum of 98 per cent. in Philadelphia will come at 9.08 and leave a thin outer edge of light, still strong enough to be blinding. At 10.26 the sun will slip out of all shadow.

The eclipse is caused by the moon passing between the earth, and the sun. The moon, like the earth has no light of its own and shines only because it reflects to us the light of the sun which falls upon it, so when it comes between us and the sun, the sun shines only upon the side of the moon which is turned away from us. The side toward us is dark except for a little reflected back to it from the earth.

The moon's shadow consists of two parts, a cone touching the moon and tapering to a point close to the earth's surface within which all the light of the sun is shut out by the moon, and a part of another cone also touching the moon and increasing in size toward the earth.

The eclipse comes toward the observer from the west at a rate of 50 miles a minute, so fast that attempts to obtain a moving picture of it have been unsuccessful. However, another attempt will be made from airplanes and dirigibles during the coming eclipse.

TO TAKE FARM CENSUS

Six of Nine Enumerators Are Named for Centre County.

The U. S. department of agriculture is vitally interested in the farm census now being taken all over the country, and enumeration of which is now in progress. Every farmer should also be interested and do his best to help the enumerators when they call on him, because the work will result in obtaining facts that will lead to a more thorough understanding of the actual conditions existing throughout the country.

While not all of the enumerators for Centre County have been named up to this time, the following men are at work in their respective districts: Samuel B Holter, of Howard—Boggs, Curtin and Howard Townships. Joseph K. Alexander, of Fleming—Burnside, Snow Shoe, and Union townships. Charles W. Slack, Centre Hall—Potter and Harris townships. J. Foster Musser—State College, College and Ferguson townships. J. Gross Shook, of Spring Mills—Gregg and Penn townships. Earl H. Peck, of Nittany—Liberty, Marian and Walker townships.

The census is taken by the department of commerce, in co-operation with the department of agriculture. The schedule of inquiry was approved by the department of agriculture, its object being to determine matters of fundamental importance to the welfare of the agricultural industry. It will take in farm acreage, land utilization, livestock, crops, etc., and will show conditions as they actually existed in 1924.

The enumerators have been suggested by the local Farm Agent, Mr. Blaney, and Howard M. Gore, secretary of agriculture appeals to farmers to give prompt reply to the questions submitted and in every way possible, facilitate the work.

Raids at Lock Haven.

A dozen or more cigar stores, billiard rooms and restaurants at Lock Haven were raided last Saturday night and twenty arrests made. A number of slot machines and punch boards were confiscated. Mayor Alfred Sterner's cigar store was among the places raided. He claimed that a slot machine in use there was not a gambling device, but it was confiscated. The raiding was done by ten State policemen, two enforcement officers, and several Clinton county officials. A small quantity of liquor and a part of a dismantled still were picked up.

Elks Have New Home.

Philipsburg Elks have taken possession of their new home, located on Second Street, formerly the property of C. W. Owens. The building has been completely remodeled, giving Philipsburg Elks one of the most modern homes enjoyed by any lodge in the interior of the State. The formal opening and housewarming will not be held for several weeks.

TWO OATS LEADERS

State College Develops Brands Showing Wonderful Results.

Two new oats varieties, Keystone and Patterson, promise to be the best Pennsylvania grain growers ever yet had, if yields to date are any indications of their abilities. Both varieties were developed at the Penna. State College Experiment Station, where they have averaged for the past 10 years nearly 10 bushels per acre more than Sixty-Day, an early variety, according to C. F. Noll, experiment agronomist at the station.

These two varieties have been known in the past as 53-11 and 63-11. The former has now been named Keystone for the State where it originated and the other is called Patterson in honor of the late William Patterson, superintendent of the College farms for many years.

In many parts of the State these varieties have been grown in demonstration plots for several years with very satisfactory yields. Approximately 1100 acres of the two varieties were grown last year, so 5,000 or 6,000 bushels of seed will be available for distribution. The demand was greater than the supply last spring, Noll reports.

The two varieties are most alike in height, in type of grain and in yielding capacity, but Keystone is about two days earlier than Patterson. The grains are yellow and rather small. They have a thin hull and the percentage of kernels in the grain is usually higher than in the larger grained varieties.

"These oats are best adapted to those sections of Pennsylvania where early oats do best," says Noll. "There they have proved much superior to Sixty-Day or Emerson, the most commonly early grown variety."

AUTO MEN MEET

Local Dealers Plan Annual Show First Week in March.

At a meeting of the Centre County Auto Dealers Association on Monday evening, it was decided to hold the annual auto show in Bellefonte during the first week of March.

No definite plans have been made for the show as yet. A committee consisting of G. M. Dunlap, chairman; Charles R. Beatty and J. P. Lyon, all of Bellefonte, and Frank Keller, of State College, was appointed and will be in charge of all the show arrangements. The manager for this year is Gideon C. Payne. The old officers of the association were re-elected as follows: George A. Beezer, Bellefonte, president; "Peck" Snyder, State College, vice president; Charles R. Beatty and John P. Lyon, both of Bellefonte, treasurer and secretary, respectively.

DEATH ASCRIBED TO EAST INDIAN MAGIC

Hard Otherwise to Explain Sergeant's Demise.

Mr. O. Rothfield, author of "Women of India," I.C.S., relates the following remarkable incident, which he does not attempt to explain:

The incident concerned a smart young Sikh sergeant of the mounted police, a strapping fellow, with a great broad chest, the best wrestler on the force. The other part was played by a Mussulman fakir. He was an old, old man with a white beard, of quite unknown age, who beyond the memory of the living generation had crouched on a mat at a corner where two sunken lanes meet. The scene was a village, the poor successor of a dead city of palaces and of mosques, not far north of Bombay.

In the midday heat, under the glare of the sun, his eyes half shut, vaguely thinking of home and dinner, the sergeant came cantering loosely along, with the reins slipping through his fingers. An overhanging bank hid the fakir at the corner, and the pony shied before the rider saw him. The sergeant all but went over the horse's head, and pulled himself back into the saddle with an effort.

He was angry, of course, as any one would have been. It is not nice to be brought up with a jerk and feel a fool, when one is hot and tired and hungry and thirsty. So he cursed the fakir, and threatened to run him in as a nuisance.

He was not respectful, certainly, and he was an unbeliever—a Sikh, not a Mussulman. But this does not excuse the old fakir. He—the old fraud—lifted himself up in turn and cursed and cursed in a solemn, dignified way, chanting the words like a communication. And he ended with an imprecation that the officer should die in the sixth month after five months of wasting.

There was little real jauntiness left in the sergeant when the old man was done. But he carried it off well enough and laughed about it that evening with his friends at headquarters, and several times he laughed again during the next week. But it is a fact that he began to lose weight in the second week, that his cheeks fell in and a cough shook him, that he was spitting blood within three months, and that he was dead within six.

Did he die of a suggested fear? and if so, why should it take that form exactly? Or was it really the old fakir's fixed thought, his persistent hate, that held and shook him across space and across time?

Only the old man could have answered, and he was silent.

Use of Stethoscope Old Medical Custom

Sir William Hale White, president of the Royal Society of Medicine, recently expressed the opinion that "nothing that doctors do has seized the popular imagination more than their habit of tapping the chest and listening to it with a stethoscope." Medical men in their investigations have found that this tapping of the chest is a quite remote custom, the Toronto Globe observes. A book written in Latin in 1761 recorded the fact that the chest of a healthy person when tapped yielded a note "like the stifled sound of a drum covered with a thick cloth."

A French physician, Laennec, is said to have made the first use of the stethoscope. For years he was the victim of ill health and family troubles, but after the battle of Waterloo he made public the discovery that it was possible to listen to a person's chest with a stethoscope.

He also wrote a book telling of all the human ailments it was possible to detect by means of this instrument. Sir William Hale White says that from this book arose the physician's habit of asking patients to pronounce certain words like "ninety-nine" when examining the chest. These words are produced in the larynx, and are suitable sounds when carried through the chest to help the physician to obtain confirmatory evidence of his tapping.

Warden Had Some Good Picking "on the Side"

Those who talk of present-day graft would be interested in itemizing the emoluments of the keeper of the Tower of London during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. His nominal salary was only about $500 a year, but he had numerous privileges. Most of the prisoners, being political offenders of high rank, were granted liberal allowances by the government for their board. Whenever they were too proud to accept this allowance it fell to the warden.

Moreover, this official was entitled to seize all cattle that slipped off London bridge, all carts that fell into the moat, all flotsam and jetsam in the Thames, all swans that floated below the bridge, two flagons of wine from every vessel arriving from Bordeaux, a toll of sea food from every fishing craft landing in London, and as many rushes as "a person could hold between two arms" from boats carrying such cargo, besides a fee on all hides cured at East Smithfield, near the Tower.

Old Hen's Christmas Gift

An attorney who was also an enthusiastic chicken fancier spent much money and time coddling blooded hens that did not begin to pay for their keep. He had several pullets that were guaranteed to be the best kind of layers, yet every morning for almost a year he returned empty-handed from his search for eggs. Finally he had given up hope.

On Christmas morning, however, he was astonished and delighted to find four beautiful pearly eggs in one of the nests. He quickly gathered them up and ran triumphantly to show them to his skeptical wife. Not until he had emerged from the dimness of the henhouse did he notice that each egg bore the neatly penciled greeting: "Merry Christmas from the Old Hen."—Youth's Companion.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Girl Injured Coasting.

Malvena, 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Campman, of Beech Creek, received a nasty gash above her eye while coasting nearby her home last week. She, with a number of other children, was coasting down a steep hill onto the mill pond after dark, and failed to get out of the way of a sled immediately following her, and which struck her on the head. She was taken to a nearby store where the cut was bandaged, before she was taken home.

Correspondence

Pine Grove Mills.

H. L. Dale and family and Mrs. Sarah Carson, of Bellefonte, spent Sunday afternoon at his parental home on the Branch.

Miss Lizzy Goheen was a Centre Hall visitor during the latter end of the week with her cousins, Mrs. Frank Goodhart and Mrs. Harry Potter.

Among the sick are Mrs. Etta Corl, Earl and Ada Harper, Esther Corl and Ella Kline.

On Saturday evening, Mrs. Sarah Everhart celebrated her 73rd birthday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Quinn near-by town. The aged lady is Mr. Quinn's mother and lives alone at Franksville. She enjoys remarkably good health. She was the recipient of many useful gifts as well as many congratulations for a long lease of life. She is the widow of John Everhart deceased.

Dr. Sam M. Gilliland, of Lancaster, spent last week visiting Centre County folks nearby his old home.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Louck are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a little son. It is the first born and they are correspondingly happy and have named the little chap, Roy, Jr.

Fred Corl of Altoona, spent Sunday with his mother, who is among the sick.

Mrs. Ella Gardner is convalescing from an attack of grip.

J. D. Neidigh is loading some cars with wheat.

Mr. and Mrs. Mac Fry spent Friday afternoon at the Ben Everhart home and visited their old neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Reed.

A fine house greeted the Millheim High School orchestra on Saturday evening, and enjoyed every minute of the program.

Dr. L. E. Kidder and wife have been spending some time in the city of Brotherly Love.

Superintendent C. L. Goodling attended the funeral of his aunt at the Mountain City last Wednesday and made a brief visit with his parents at York, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Rockey, of Boalsburg, spent Thursday at the James Gilliland home in the Glades.

Rev. Robert Shives and wife, and his sister, all of State College, spent Sunday afternoon at the W. H. Weaver home on the Branch.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Reed of Rock Springs, motored to Bellefonte to spend Sunday with the latter's father, Mr. Parsons, who is quite ill and almost blind. The aged couple are spending the winter in that place with friends.

The grim reaper of death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Corl on West Main Street, laying its icy hands on their baby daughter, Etta Viola, last Tuesday morning, after a brief illness of that often fatal disease, pneumonia. The babe was aged seven weeks. Beside the fond parents, two brothers, William and Herbert, are saddened by the death of their only sister. Funeral services were held at the family residence Thursday at 10 A. M. Interment was made in the Pine Grove cemetery, Rev. J. M. Kirkpatrick officiating.

The three-link fraternity, lodge No. 896, celebrated the 50th anniversary of its organization in fine style in its spacious hall, crowded to standing capacity. After general greetings, Professor Whitehouse was called to preside and in a fine speech presented Prof. Shiras, of State College, who made everybody welcome. Prof. Smith outlined briefly the organization of the Boalsburg lodge of Odd Fellows by Capt. Fry as grand marshal 50 years ago, with the required charter members. We rank among the foremost lodges in the country. D. W. Myers, the dean of the lodge, and only member present that attended the organization, and who has been its treasurer for many years, recounted its advance in 50 years. He has the 50 year gold emblem. The dean was followed by Rev. Wm. Jacob Magolfin, who spoke briefly on true fellowship. Rev. W. W. Moyer, the new minister, thought it a good way to become better acquainted. Rev. Zeigler, one of the oldest members, gave his version on how to replenish the larder with ham and doughnuts. Mrs. E. W. Hess presided at the piano with great success and played splendid music for the occasion. A fine chicken supper with all the trimmings was served. Boalsburg is noted for its pretty women and good cooks. Covers were laid for 230 and all were taken. The lodge has a membership of 160 and a new class waiting.

S. S. Workers Institute.

The Annual Institute for the District officers of Centre County Sunday Schools will be held on Saturday, Jan. 24th at the U. B. Church, Bellefonte. Sessions will be held in the morning at 10 o'clock and afternoon at 2 o'clock. Dr. H. M. Fischer, of the State staff, will be the main speaker and will direct the discussions. This Institute is especially for the district officers of the county and the pastors of the churches. It is urgent that each of the twelve districts be represented. The sessions are open to anyone interested in Sunday School work and a cordial invitation is extended to teachers and workers to attend.

Pleasant Gap

Mrs. James Jodon and two daughters spent Sunday with the former's mother at their recent home at Milesburg.

Mrs. C. W. Rishel is spending the week with friends in Williamsport.

The second week of a series of meetings in the M. E. church has proved very successful.

Earl Rimmey, one of the carpenters formerly employed at the penitentiary, is now working in Lewistown.

The funeral of Kenneth Brooks who died in Pittsburgh was held from his home here on Tuesday afternoon. The body was taken to the Lutheran Church where the sermon was preached by Rev. C. W. Rishell. Burial was made in the Advent cemetery.

A large number of people attended the funeral of C. E. Gheen on Sunday, near Jersey Shore. The family returned home on Tuesday, and will remain for sometime, at least, in their present dwelling. Hosts of friends extend to Mrs. Gheen and children their sincere sympathy. Among the floral tributes were three pieces, gifts of the three schools at which each of the three youngest children are enrolled.

A plan is on foot to place electric street sights in Pleasant Gap. This is a crying need, and has so far been recognized but not met, chiefly through lack of someone to head the movement. Already a number of people have signified their willingness to contribute of time and finances. The sponsors of the scheme announce a mass meeting to be held in the near future. It is earnestly hoped that every person interested will attend. Notice of the date will appear in the stores.

The Ku Klux Klan attended Sunday services in the M. E. church. There were nearly one hundred Klansmen, men, women and children in robes, occupied the reserved seats on one side of the church and standing room even was filled by others. Rev. C. W. Rishell preached a very impressive sermon. Among other things he urged the Klansmen to be true to the principles for which the Klansmen say they are banded together—viz: promotion of true American ideals of Liberty and emphasized the fact that the Klan is neither anti-Jewish nor anti-Catholic, but pro-American.

A most enjoyable surprise birthday was tendered Miss Helen Schreffler at her home on Friday evening by her parents. Games were played, and refreshments served at midnight. Those present were as follows: Misses Helen Markle, Louise Eckenroth, Grace Confer, Elinor Magargel, Audrey Keller, Kathryn Keller Pearl Irvin, Catherine Sampsel, Christine Weaver, Nellie Baney, June Noll, Lila Evey. Messrs. Arthur Himes, Samuel Cross, Lloyd McKee, Morris Larimer, Gerald Evey, Harold Mulbarger, Gerald Millward, Miles Magargel, David Weaver, Randall Keller, Fred Zettle, Roscoe Treaster.

Boalsburg.

Mrs. Harry Kuhn and daughter returned to their home in Williamsport on Monday.

Miss Beulah Fortney visited in Altoona from Sunday until Tuesday.

Cyrus Wagner, of Altoona, was an over-Sunday visitor at his home here.

D. W. Meyer, Mrs. J. P. Wagner, Neil and Earl Meek, of Altoona, visited here from Thursday until Sunday.

Edward Woomer, of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, is greeting old friends here.

Dr. Wm. Woods and mother returned to their home last Friday. Dr. Woods returned to Pittsburgh on Wednesday.

The Sunday School class of the Reformed church taught by Mrs. Wm. Stover, will hold a "Valentine Social" at the Fisher home, Feb. 14. A silver offering will be taken.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Zerby and family, of State College, spent Sunday at the Gingerich home.

To Face Larceny Charge.

Albert Benson, alias Denius Rambeau, of near Elmira, N. Y., on Monday in the Lycoming County Court, entered a plea to stealing a revolver from a room at the City hotel in Williamsport. Rambeau has been in jail for six weeks. The court sentenced him to spend one month in the county jail. Judge Whitehead was informed by Sheriff H. J. Little that there is a warrant at the jail from Centre county in which Rambeau is charged with the larceny of an automobile which he used to take away another man's wife. The theft was committed at Bellefonte several months ago. Rambeau stole an automobile belonging to Domer Ishler, of Centre Hall, a rural mail carrier.

Whiterock to Hydrate Lime.

The new $35,000 hydrating plant of the Whiterock quarries company, at Pleasant Gap, is nearing completion and will be ready for use sometime next month. This company has never before competed in the hydrated lime field, but tests have shown that the rock quarried at Pleasant Gap is peculiarly adapted to this process. Hydrated lime for agricultural, chemical and commercial uses will be manufactured. A grinding plant has been installed in the same building and will manufacture ground lime in large quantities.

Louie Faitalur Dead.

Louie Faitalur, the man who was found near the point of death in the creek near Wagner's mill last Sunday evening, died at the Centre County Hospital on Monday morning at 4 o'clock from the effects of exposure. Deceased was 65 years old and a native of Austria. He had been in this country about 36 years and was engaged as a laborer, having been employed by various lime companies nearby Bellefonte. His only living relative is a cousin, Joseph Kusis, of nearby Bellefonte, and with whom the man made his home. Funeral services were held on Wednesday at the Catholic church. Interment in the Catholic cemetery.

Kenneth Brooks Dead.

Kenneth Brooks, 19 years old son of Orlando Brooks, of Pleasant Gap, died from pneumonia in a Pittsburgh hospital late Friday evening. He was a bright, energetic young man and was well and favorably known in Pleasant Gap. He had been working in Pittsburgh only a short time. In addition to his father and step mother, the following brothers and sisters survive: Leonard, of near Pittsburgh; Frank, Dale, Ray and Mrs. Walter Dunklebarger, of Pleasant Gap. Funeral services were held in the Lutheran church at Pleasant Gap on Tuesday afternoon. Interment in the Advent cemetery at Yarnell.

Edward Doll Dead.

Edward Doll, a native of Bellefonte, but residing in Altoona for the past 20 years, died at his home at that place on Tuesday at 1 A. M. Deceased was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis Doll, and was born in Bellefonte 44 years ago. Surviving are his wife and four children: Margaret, a nurse at the Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh; Helen, Madge and Robert, all at home. The following brothers and sisters also survive: W. H., George L., Louis, Jr., Mrs. Rose Pearl and Frank, all of Bellefonte. Funeral services were held on Thursday morning at Altoona. Interment in the Catholic cemetery at that place.

Mrs. Mary McCargar Dead.

Mrs. Mary J. McCargar, widow of John S. McCargar, died at the home of James D. Seibert last Friday afternoon from a complication of diseases. Deceased was born at Towanda, a daughter of Roderick and Lois Rutter Granger. Had she lived until February 22nd, she would have become 70 years of age. Her husband, a well known insurance agent of Bellefonte, passed away 3 years ago. She is survived by a brother, Alexander Granger of Towanda. Funeral services were conducted from the Seibert home on Monday afternoon by the Rev. E. E. McKelvey. Interment in the Union cemetery.

W. Scott Woods Dead.

W. Scott Woods, of Rush Twp., died on Tuesday morning at his home from a complication of diseases. He had been a teamster for years in that section and was well and favorably known over all the western end of the county. Deceased was born Nov. 3, 1831, at Julian, and in 1870 was united in marriage to Miss Ellen Stine, also of Julian, who died 8 years ago. Surviving are 3 sons: William, of Rush Twp.; Winfield, Jr., at home, and John, of Claysburg. Funeral services were conducted from the late home on Thursday afternoon. Interment in the Philipsburg cemetery.

Mrs. Rachael Lucas Dead.

Mrs. Rachael Harvey Lucas, widow of the late Reuben Lucas, Civil war veteran, died at her home at Howard on Monday of last week, aged 80 years. Deceased was born at Williamsport, a daughter of Carson and Lydia Harvey, and was the last surviving member of a large family. Having no children, she was cared for by a number of nephews and nieces, of Howard. She was a devoted member of the Disciple church and a faithful attendant at Bible school. Interment in the Methodist cemetery at Howard on Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Sarah A. Kephart Dead.

Mrs. Sarah Ade Kephart, of Johnstown, died last Thursday morning from a complication of diseases. Deceased was born at Snow Shoe, a daughter of Farmington and Amanda (Roach) Ross, both of whom reside at Snow Shoe. In addition to her parents, her husband and the following children survive: Lyre, of Youngstown, O.; Mrs. Glen Slagle, William Furman, Olive and Ethel, all of Johnstown. Funeral services were held at Johnstown on Saturday.

Mrs. Laura Goehring Dead.

Mrs. Laura Meredith Goehring died at Johnstown on Monday of last week. Deceased was born at Snow Shoe, Sept. 2, 1908, a daughter of David and Minnie Meredith. When she was quite young the family moved to Tyrone. Surviving are her husband, three children, her parents and several brothers and sisters.

Mrs. H. S. Basom Dead.

Mrs. H. S. Basom, widow of Rev. H. S. Basom, former Evangelical minister at Rebersburg, died at her home at Carlisle on Monday morning. Deceased is survived by a number of children among whom is Mrs. C. M. Bierly, of Rebersburg. Funeral services were held on Thursday at Carlisle.

DAVIS ACQUITTED

Former Rockview Deputy Warden Cleared of Murder Charge.

Elmer "Red" Davis was found "not guilty" of murdering John Mullen, by the jury which last week tried the former deputy warden of Rockview at Lewistown. Davis presented the defense that the shooting was accidental, and occurred when Mullen tried to take a gun from Davis. The shooting, it will be recalled, occurred late in September, last, nearby Lewistown, along the Kishacoquillas creek. The Harrisburg "Telegraph" published the following graphic repoat of the trial from Lewistown:

The defendant took the stand early in the afternoon and remained there for one hour, telling how the accident occurred and answering the multitude of questions fired at him in machine-gun order by John J. Patterson, who was assisting District Attorney John T. Wilson in the trial.

Davis told the court that Mullen had asked to see his gun and as he laid it out on his (Davis') hand, Mullen grabbed for it and a tussle followed, the gun exploding during the tussle. Davis claims he fell and was unconscious. He recovered consciousness after he had been placed in a cell in the Mifflin County jail, by County Detective Merriel A. Davis.

From across the mountains in Centre County there came men who followed Davis to the witness stand and told of his excellent reputation. Men such as Fred Healy, a former deputy warden at the Rockview Penitentiary; Richard Taylor, sheriff of Centre County; Harry Austin, County Commissioner of Centre County; Harry A. Rossman, register of wills of Centre County; William Musser and Gilbert Boyer, guards at the penitentiary, who had been with Davis on his trip to Lewistown to round up several escaped prisoners when the shooting occurred, came and testified. Others called by the defense were: Charles F. Kessler, former mayor of Pittsburgh; John Francies, former warden at the Western Penitentiary at Pittsburgh, where Davis was located prior to going to Rockview; George Davis, a brother of the defendant; Sheriff A. C. Kemberling, Mifflin County; James Keister, deputy sheriff of Mifflin County, and E. F. Shields, from Bellefonte.

At the conclusion of the presentation of the defense, State Senator Frederick W. Culbertson, who represented the defendant, made his plea to the jury, telling of the man's character, and that it was not premeditated, and that the Commonwealth had really presented no real argument for Davis' conviction.

Attorney Patterson followed with a talk to the jury, reviewing the facts brought out by the witnesses of the Commonwealth who declared they had seen the shooting, the fact that the gun was in Davis' hands when the officer arrested him, that he could not have been unconscious and shot the man, that the course of the bullet indicated that fact. For 50 minutes Patterson pleaded with the jury for conviction.

Much difficulty was experienced in securing a jury. Six jurors were rejected before the first man was accepted late Tuesday afternoon, and when the original panel of 60 prospective jurors had been examined only 10 had been accepted. Sheriff Kemberling was instructed to go through the court and streets and summon talesman to secure 2 men to complete the jury. Many of the talesmen were rejected for various reasons, but late Thursday morning 2 additional men were secured.

No women were accepted as jurors because no accommodations suitable for housing a mixed jury could be secured.

Public opinion favored the acquittal of the former deputy warden.

Fire at Pine Grove Farm.

Fire which broke out in the blacksmith shop on the Waido Corl farm at Pine Grove Mills last Saturday evening completely destroyed an implement shed, pig-pen, chicken coop and the blacksmith shop, entailing a loss estimated at $5000. In addition to the loss of the buildings, 23 head of swine and a number of implements were consumed in the flames. The Corl family had retired for the night and the fire was discovered by passing neighbors. The origin of the blaze is unknown.

Fire at Rockview.

Defective electric wiring in the Dreese homestead at Rockview, now used as officers' quarters, caused a slight fire early last Friday morning which damaged the building to the extent of $200, most of which was caused by the necessity of chopping a hole in the floor to extinguish the flames. About 15 officers are quartered in the building, including 2 married men, whose families reside there permanently.

Fire at Woodring Home.

A slight fire, which started from an overheated oil stove, broke out about 11 o'clock on Saturday evening in an upper room at the Robert Woodring home, on Howard St. The local fire companies quickly responded and the flames were extinguished by the use of chemicals. The furniture of the room was damaged somewhat and the window frames burned.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK

Conditions in our country are ripe for a period of prosperity. We have emerged from a time of severe depression. The past year has been one of liquidation with dullness in trade manufacturing.

All this is changed.

Big crops here and poor ones abroad have raised the price of wheat and other farm products. This means increased buying power on the part of our farmers.

Radical legislation is not to be feared Banking conditions are sound, money is easy, credit is abundant. Car loadings are the greatest in our history and the railroads are in condition to make long deferred extensions and improvements. Conditions in Europe are rapidly improving.

The outlook is bright for business of every kind.

INDIGESTION

Caused by

Acid-Stomach

Millions of people—in fact about 9 out of 10—suffer more or less from indigestion, acute or chronic. Nearly every case is caused by Acid-Stomach.

There are other stomach disorders which also are sure signs of Acid-Stomach—belching, heartburn, bloat after eating, food repeating, sour, gassy stomach. There are many ailments which, while they do not cause much distress in the stomach itself, are, nevertheless, traceable to an acid stomach. Among these are nervousness, biliousness, cirrhosis of the liver, rheumatism, impoverished blood, weakness, insomnia, melancholia and a long train of physical and mental miseries that keep the victims in miserable health year after year.

The right thing to do is to attack these ailments at their source—get rid of the acid-stomach. A wonderful modern remedy called EATONIC now makes it easy to do this.

One of hundreds of thousands of grateful users of EATONIC writes: "I have been troubled with intestinal indigestion for about nine years and have spent quite a sum for medicine, but without relief. After using EATONIC for a few days the gas and pains in my bowels disappeared. EATONIC is just the remedy I needed."

We have thousands of letters telling of these marvelous benefits. Try EATONIC and you, too, will be just as enthusiastic in its praise.

Your druggist has EATONIC. Get a big 50c box from him today. He will refund your money if you are not satisfied.

Move to Save Antelopes

In the pioneer days of the West the graceful pronged-horn antelope were more numerous than buffalo, numbering approximately 75,000,000. Now there are only about 22,000 in the whole United States and for this reason a large tract of land in Oregon has been reserved to prevent the threatened extinction of the animals.

Driving Your Own Motor in Europe

Washington Man Tells of Novel Adventures.

Washington, D. C.—Seeing England by paddling a Canadian canoe, touring Holland in a canal boat, and, more recently, viewing the continent from the air afford new thrills—and so did the novel adventure of a Washington man who drove his own automobile through London and continental cities.

David Fairchild, famous plant explorer, writes to the National Geographic society of his experiences amid new traffic conditions, ranging from horse dray and pushcart obstructions to a congestion of bicycle riders, as follows:

"Well, I should say the way to have experiences in Europe is to come in your own hand-driven car, leaving every vestige of a professional chauffeur behind, and poke around through the narrow streets and the beautiful highways of these remarkable countries.

"It was something of an accident which landed us in Europe with the one hundred and fortieth automobile to cross the Atlantic this year. It was my stubborn disbelief in the information I got, which varied from the statement that it was just as expensive to travel in Europe as it is in America, to the discouraging one that it would be difficult to drive in London because they drive to the left there, and the streets are so congested that a man cannot drive for himself at all.

"The misinformation about motoring in Europe which exists on your side is colossal. If you can interview people and speak a little of the languages of the land you visit, motoring in Europe is the only way by which you can compare it with America on the same plane. If you have a car at home and run about everywhere and come here and depend on taxis, you will not learn any more about the country than you would with taxis in America.

"I have found the garages small and dark affairs, but they cost only from 25 cents to 50 cents a night. I have left tools in the car continually and nothing has disappeared. I have been arrested in London and have a letter from Scotland Yard excusing me—for really, the reasons for the arrest were technical ones, pure and simple.

A "System" for Driving.

"I can find my way all over that town, and my 'system' is as simple as A B C. I get the best map possible and place my son on the front seat and he calls out the streets, and unless we get started wrong, we go right through the narrowest streets and alleys of that great jumbled-up thing called London.

"I wandered in and out of the tiny little streets and got an idea of London which it is impossible to get without a car of your own. London has a terrible traffic problem to face. She must either give up the idea of speeding her commerce and get it up on tires, or broaden scores of streets and run through broad avenues somewhere.

"In Holland there are still so few automobiles that there is not yet any problem of traffic. You travel solitary and alone over roads which have cost more than the thoroughfares in America and which were built centuries ago and come after a while to discount every derogatory remark of the inhabitant as regards to the bad roads of his country.

"Years ago a Dutch friend of mine who was in Johns Hopkins as professor predicted that the bicycle would disappear because it was only a fad. Imagine my surprise to find bicycles in his country in such quantities that, like locust swarms, they blocked the wheels of traffic. I never saw so many. Every family must have one for each member of it. And they never try to get out of your way at all, but take up as much room as they want and crowd you off into the ditch, so to speak. But the streets are so narrow and so crooked that it is impossible to go fast, and consequently it is quite as safe driving about as it is to run a machine through a crowded garage.

Frontiers Easy to Pass.

"Before I came I heard that at each boundary I would have difficulties of all sorts to go through with. This is a mistake. It is about as easy to pass a frontier now in a car as it is to back up to a gas tank and take in ten gallons of gas. You show your carnet de voyage, the officer writes out a leaflet and the stub and detaches it and bows you through. Not one ugly word or sign of impoliteness have I had shown me either by customs officials, immigration officials, or policemen. Even when I was arrested on Piccadilly by two policemen because my car had a bumper and the bumper concealed the license tag and the policeman didn't understand what the bumper was for. Anyway, I parted with a laugh on their faces when I told them that we had in Washington 104,000 cars with bumpers, and that if I had done what they directed me to do—viz., turn right around in a crowded street—they would have arrested me for that act. The only real quarrel I have with London is that they will not allow you to park cars on the deserted side streets unless you tip someone to watch the car. I think the idea comes down from the days of horse traffic when the horse might run away. There are a few widely separated parking places designated by the police, but utterly useless to one who wants to do any business. And this, mind you, where there are but a small fraction of the cars which we have in our American cities."

African Antelope Hardest to Catch

Their Horns Easily Harmed, Says Hunter.

New York.—The most difficult animal to catch alive is not the ferocious lion, the tiger, the elephant, the hippopotamus or the bear, but the African antelope, according to Ellis S. Joseph, who has spent a lifetime, nearly, studying the habits and the haunts of wild animals of the jungle and the forest. He has captured alive nearly every kind of animal known. His catches are always in great demand by zoological gardens and circuses.

Mr. Joseph claims Australia as his home, though it is apparent that he spends the greater part of his time in wild, out-of-the-way places, where wild animals and savages abide and where the face of a white man is still a strange and terrifying object. While in New York, Mr. Joseph makes his home at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

"The African antelope is extremely difficult to catch alive and unhurt," said Mr. Joseph, "because of its extreme delicacy, particularly of its horns. Unlike the horns of the elk or deer, the horns of an antelope are permanent. They do not shed them in certain seasons, and if these horns are broken or injured the damage is irreparable.

"The traps set for antelopes must be watched day and night. As soon as an antelope is captured the guards must rush forward immediately to prevent the high-strung animal from smashing his horns.

Lions Easily Caught.

"Lions, on the other hand, are the easiest animals to capture. A cage is made in the jungle by setting tall, strong stakes firmly in the ground, upon which a roof is fastened. A sliding door that drops from the top is then arranged with ropes, pulleys and weights in such a manner that the lightest touch of a rope will cause the door to drop. The rope is placed in such a position before the opening of the cage that the lion is sure to touch it as he bounds in to get at the bait—usually a live animal—which is used to lure him within.

"Once the door is slid into position Mr. Lion is securely captured. Then a cage with steel bars is rolled up to the trap, with its door just opposite the trap door. The door is then opened and, just when the lion thinks he is making a dash for freedom, he finds himself securely fastened in the steel cage.

"Monkeys are captured by guile. They are very fond of a certain variety of tuber that grows in profusion in Africa. Therefore snares are baited with this luscious food, and in that way they are easily captured. Once caught in the snare, the guards rush forward and throw nets over the heads of the monkeys, thus preventing them from escaping.

"I had a pet chimpanzee which I took with me on one of my journeys into the interior of West Africa. In the jungle I took the chain off my pet and let him roam at large in his native haunts. No, he did not run away and return to his natural element. He disappeared into the wilderness, but he returned after a few days, glad to see me again.

Home for a Visit.

"It was as though he had simply gone home to visit his relatives and told them that he was prospering in civilization and intended to remain among men. Thereafter the chimpanzee came and went at will. Sometimes he would be gone two or three days, but he always came back.

"Chimpanzees grow to be very large. It is not unusual for them to reach the weight of 300 pounds when full grown. It is not known just what the average length of their lives is. Eighteen years is the longest any have been known to live in captivity, but, on the other hand, the age when captured was not known.

"The chimpanzee is extremely intelligent, and there seems to be no limit to the things they can be taught. They become very attached to humans and are very affectionate and demonstrative—too much so at times. I had a big chimpanzee at one time in Australia. Once when going on a journey I left him in the zoo at Sydney until I should return. I was gone about eight months that trip.

"When I came back I went to see my pet. As I entered the cage he simply went crazy with delight at seeing me again. He threw his arms about me and began to bite my face, which is one of their ways of expressing affection. But this time his joy overcame his judgment, and instead of biting gently, as he meant to do, he just about tore my face to pieces. It took 43 stitches to close the wounds.

"The chimpanzee is about the nearest approach to man in the scale of animal life. I have been much interested in experimenting with fingerprints of these monkeys. So far I have finger-printed about fifty chimpanzees, and I find that there is as much difference in the prints as there is in the finger-prints of men."

Gigantic Bust Found in Old African Tomb

Tripoli.—While Count Giuseppe Volpi, governor of Tripoli, was visiting the excavations at Sabrata, the most important of the Phoenician tombs, recently, there was unearthed a gigantic bust which is believed to represent the African Jove. In addition to the bust, a number of funeral urns and vases of great value were discovered in the ruins of a neighboring temple. The excavators also found a statue of a Roman emperor and a quantity of decorative marbles of the highest artistic quality.

LOST HUNTER FIGHTS WOLVES AND QUICKSAND

Michigan Man Has Terrifying Adventures in Depths of Forest.

Port Huron, Mich.—Lost for 36 hours in the depths of an Upper Peninsula forest, while he fought hunger, savage wolves, quicksand and despair, George W. Everson, of Port Huron, has returned home none the worse for his terrifying adventures, which were encountered during a deer hunting trip.

Everson, member of a party of three hunters, was encamped near Two-Hearted river, 30 miles north of Newberry. One morning he set out alone on a deer hunt, carrying only his compass and rifle. Soon he struck the trail of a buck and followed it for some time. Shortly after noon he stumbled into a quicksand pit and before he recognized the nature of his surroundings had sunk to his knees in the shifting, sucking sand. Every effort that Everson made to extricate himself pushed him deeper into the pit, until finally the sand had reached his waist and was climbing steadily.

Life Saved by Log.

Everson's life was saved by the presence of a log that had fallen across the pit. As he sank deeper into the yielding sand he twisted his body until he grasped the log with his fingers. Slowly, inch by inch, he worked his fingers over the log, the blood spurting from his bruised hands as he began the laborious process of pulling his body from the quagmire.

At last he succeeded in reaching firm ground. But his compass was broken and he realized that he was hopelessly lost. Physically exhausted, and aching in every limb, he picked up his rifle, which he had thrown to hard ground while in the sand pit, and began to stumble blindly through the dense forest. Night came and a pack of wolves trailed him. Everson was without matches, and being unacquainted with woodlore, did not know two to start a fire by discharging his rifle.

Pulling His Body From the Quagmire.

So he remained standing throughout the night, occasionally firing his rifle and shouting to frighten away the wolves, which kept circling about.

Misses Searching Party.

When morning came the wolves disappeared and Everson resumed his wanderings, shouting at the top of his voice. The other members of his camping party, who were searching for him, occasionally heard his shouts, but were unable to locate him. About noon he became so hoarse that he no longer could shout and he stumbled on despairing of ever seeing his friends again, and suffering from hunger and fatigue.

Late that night he stumbled upon the camp of another hunting party. He was so dazed that he hardly could tell of his experiences, but was given food and shelter for the night. The next day his new friends helped him to locate his own party.

Bandits Lose Watch and Chain in Peculiar Way

New York.—Benjamin Kerstner, a Bronx jeweler, is richer by a gold watch and chain because two holdup men visited his establishment the other night. One of the bandits handed him the watch to examine, and then produced a revolver, ordering him to throw up his hands. Just then several customers entered and the men fled without taking anything, leaving the watch and chain as souvenirs of their visit.

Cat Causes Flames That Result in $25,000 Damage

Martinez, Cal.—One ordinary house cat was blamed for a fire which damaged the Clay substation of the Great Western Power company to the extent of more than $25,000 and cut off Contra Costa county's light and power service for about three hours. According to employees, the cat entered the building and became entangled with some transmission wires, causing a short circuit. The cat lost his life.

Opium Common in India

It is said by a writer defending the work of Gandhi in India that the average income of the people of India is about 5 cents a day, and that opium is also said to be used almost as a household remedy among the poor for every ailment in infancy and childhood. There are about 200,000,000 people in India engaged in agricultural pursuits.

It is easier for some men to make love than it is for them to make a living.

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

Road Building Far Behind the Automobile

Millions now recognize the automobile as a necessity. It is no longer a luxury for the few. Sixty per cent of its use is for business.

Because of this the modern paved highway has become an economic necessity.

Yet although the mileage of Concrete Roads and Streets has been steadily increasing, our highway system today lags far behind the automobile. The great majority of our highways are as out of date as the single-track, narrow gauge railway of fifty years ago.

Such a condition not only seriously handicaps the progress of the automobile as a comfortable, profitable means of transportation, but also holds back commercial, industrial and agricultural advancement in practically every section of the country. It is costing taxpayers millions of dollars annually.

Highway building should be continued and enlarged upon.

Your highway authorities are ready to carry on their share of this great public work. But they must have your support. Tell them you are ready to invest in more and wider Concrete Highways now.

MORNING FROCKS FOR SPRING; NEW NECKWEAR IS IMPORTANT

PROPHECIES of coming styles for spring are not a matter of words—they appear in the collections made ready for merchants and for tourists who go South in search of spring weather. In the great markets of the country and in the parade of fashion at famous resorts, new styles are in review, and many of them are destined to appear later in all parts of these United States. However, no one cares to make selection of important summer frocks until all the new things are on display, but simple morning or day dresses may be made ready now, so that there will be no rush or worry when warm days call us out of doors.

Stylists tell us that plain, high colored linens—in soft reds, buff, blue and light green, henna and light brown—are already in demand for morning dresses and that certain heavy cotton weaves in the same colors will be used. That white crepe de chine and white wash silks with colored stripes are as sure of welcome as the sunshine is, and that, in tailored versions of the daytime frock, navy blue is coming back—and coming strong. That for all these frocks the simple, straightline silhouette remains undisturbed as the favorite of fashion and that collars and cuffs of crepe de chine, embroidered batiste or other sheer fabrics, plain and striped linens and laces are always a part of the play. They say these frocks may or may not be belted but that many of them have leather belts worn at a low waistline, skillfully made and new shades appear in plain materials. Fullness at the sides and front, panels and aprons, achieved by plaits and shirrings, and tucking at the hips, promise fuller skirts which are flared by varied means, but all from a low waistline or below the knees.

From present indications neckwear is increasing in importance and coming in for even more attention than it has just now. So long as practical day dresses remain simple and almost unadorned they must look to small finishing touches and accessories, to lift them above the level of the commonplace. The new frocks presented recently for spring, in tailored and informal types, are as simple as those that have been so successful for winter, but they reveal a greater variety in necklines and emphasize neck finishings. The scarf, or tie, or jabot attached vary the ever present collar treatment, although this remains by far the most important neck finish.

Of Navy Blue Charmeen.

Among made-up neckpieces, collar and cuff sets and scarfs or ties, the shops are showing neckwear by the yard, ready to be converted into any sort of pieces. Two examples of this attractive yardage are pictured here—one in net and lace and one in plaid and plain ribbon. Both are plaited—the net frill finished with lace insertion and narrow edging at the top and rows of colored stitching as a border. In the ribbon yardage a narrow plain ribbon is joined to plaid taffeta with a tiny gold braid. Two rows of it are set on a soft net foundation, bound on one edge with the narrower ribbon, to form collar and cuffs. The collar is finished with a ribbon tie.

Rejuvenated by Neckwear.

Last year's straightline frocks cannot be told from this year's when they are brought up-to-the-minute in style by new neckwear, and a few changes of neckwear will keep them always fresh and interesting.

Whoever has treasured fine, old-fashioned round collars, of precious lace or embroidery, has the means at hand for adding a touch of beauty and dignity to the simplest dress that will lend it the character of elegance.

IN FIVE MONTHS' RUN FOR MEMBERS

The department of Utah, American Legion, is conducting a five months' membership campaign in competition with the departments of Colorado and Wyoming, which started November 1 and is to end on March 31, it was announced recently by J. C. Rebholz, chairman of the Utah department membership committee. The outcome will decide the Rocky mountain membership championship, according to Mr. Rebholz.

A feature of the campaign will be the awards to local posts of Utah and to the individual member of any post with the highest number of enrollments to his credit. To the post with the highest membership standing in the department at the close of the campaign next March will be presented a silver loving cup. The standing of the posts will be figured on the basis of the paid-up membership as of December 31, 1924, compared with the paid-up membership at the close of the contest. At the state convention of the winning department a stand of Legion colors will be presented to the victor. The colors will be bought by a pooled fund from the three departments.

Oil Painting of York for Knoxville Library

The public library at Knoxville is soon to have an oil painting of the famous Sergeant Alvin C. York, World war hero who put 35 machine guns out of business and captured 132 German soldiers, single handed, during the late war. Sergeant York promised American Legionnaires, who will present the painting to the library, that he would pose long enough to have the picture made, though posing wasn't just in his line.

The famous soldier is much heavier than when he was discharged from the army. He stands six feet two inches in his shoes and weighs 240 pounds. When asked if he would have a cigar he replied: "No, thank you, I have not smoked, drank nor swore an oath in ten years." Asked what he thought of the chances for the promotion of world peace, he declared: "I do not believe there will ever be world peace, however much I desire to see it. The nations of Europe have always warred and are filled with petty jealousies and fear of each other, and I believe they will continue to fight. The entry of the United States into world affairs might help some."

COMMENDS LEGION

SAMUEL WOODFILL, called by General Pershing, "America's Greatest Soldier," speaking at Portsmouth, Ohio, said of the American Legion: "The returned soldiers, sailors and marines have organized a body, the American Legion, a body of men who would, if their country needed, respond to the call to the colors to the men. In the many crises which have confronted the cities in the United States in which there were posts of the American Legion, that body of men was the first to offer relief and assistance. One example, that of Lorain, Ohio, will suffice. Members of the Legion in Lorain worked unceasingly to render every assistance to the sufferers at the time of that disaster. It is essential that the American Legion in every city maintain a home. That is the hope of the organization in every city of the United States."

Thirty-Two Nations Represented in Post

The East Side post of New York county, which, under the leadership of Abraham Rosenberg, increased its membership from 65 to nearly 1,000 members and captured all membership prizes, is not only unique among Legion posts in quantity of membership, but in quality as well; the post's membership is comprised of 32 nationalities. It is situated on the lower East side of New York in a territory where the population is overwhelmingly foreign-born. Consequently Americanism work embracing classes in English for foreigners, lessons in good citizenship, etc., has a big place in the post's activities.

Will Build Legion Center

When American Legionnaires from "down the country way" visit New York city in future they can put up at their own hostelry. Two hundred thousand dollars has been raised by the New York county American Legion towards building an American Legion center in the city. The total cost of the center will be more than $500,000. The proposed building will serve for all Legion activities and will contain a restaurant, gymnasium and a swimming pool in addition to meeting and lounge rooms.

HIGH HONOR COMES TO NAVY VETERAN

Ben A. Webster, new commander of the Department of Iowa of the American Legion, is the first navy veteran, the first enlisted man and the youngest man to be elected to that position. He was born at Waucoma, Iowa, March 4, 1892.

Commander Webster was a second-class petty officer in the aviation branch at Great Lakes. At the time of the signing of the armistice he was at an officers' training school.

His record in the Legion is brilliant. He helped to organize a post at Waucoma and was commander of the Fourth district in 1923. He is a forceful speaker and an indefatigable worker. He has spent much time going from post to post, writing letters, sending telegrams and doing the thousand and one things necessary to build up and sustain the morale which has made Iowa Legionnaires famous among their fellows all over the country.

The new commander attended Shattuck Military academy for three years.

Ben A. Webster.

He graduated from the University of Minnesota. He won his "M" as a high hurdler and was president of the senior class.

He then went into the lumber business and is now general manager of a chain of yards. He is married and is the father of three children, two girls and a boy. He now lives at Mason City.

Neglecting Problems of National Defense

"The American people are neglecting problems of national defense and almost overnight have forgotten the lessons of the World war," said James A. Drain, national commander of the American Legion, at a luncheon attended by two of the United States army round-the-world flyers, Capt. Lowell H. Smith and Lieut. Leslie Arnold. "I cannot emphasize too much," Commander Drain said, "the necessity of perfecting our national defense, even while we are talking peace, and preparedness in the air is not the least of our problems by any means. Our government should follow the lead you Magellans of the air have given it, that in the unhappy event of war this country might still be in the lead as regards sufficiency and efficiency of its air forces."

Loup City (Neb.) Post Expects to Be in Lead

With a membership already 200 per cent over the top, Loup City (Neb.) post of the American Legion expects to lead the Legion in Nebraska during 1925. On October 6 the post had a meeting at which Department Commander Courtney made an address. Following the meeting 55 new members were enrolled, giving a total of 80 members for the post. Commander Courtney made one of the finest talks on the Legion ever heard in the state, say Legionnaires present. "It not only had a punch in it, but a pull as well—enough to pull half a hundred into the Legion on the spot." Commander Courtney said, among other pertinent things: "If you don't like the way a Legion post is run, get in and run it yourself."

Two Lady Adjutants in Department of Florida

The department of Florida of the Legion has two lady post adjutants, one at Miami and one at Daytona. Howard Rowton, adjutant of the department, says his "red-headed stenographer," who is his wife, says the department has a lady adjutant if you ask her. While Howard was attending the adjutants' conference at Indianapolis recently the "red-headed stenographer" kidded the boys into sending in more dues to headquarters than his adjutancy, her husband, had succeded in doing in a month of exhortation and dire threatening.

Merry Membership War

Jim Drain's recent membership message to the American Legion auxiliary, in which he said, "The potential membership of the Legion auxiliary is 10,000,000, and the most the Legion ever can have is four and one-half million. The membership of the auxiliary should easily exceed that of the Legion," is having its effect. The auxiliary of the department of Minnesota has just challenged the Legionnaires of the department to a merry little membership war to determine who will have the most members at the end of 1925.

Burlingame—Valentine.

A pretty but very informal wedding was that of Miss Helen Valentine and Bruce Burlingame, the latter of Syracuse, N. Y., solemnized at 6 o'clock on Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Harry C. Valentine, on West Curtin Street. The ceremony was performed by Justice of the Peace Harry Curtin, of Curtin, and was witnessed by the immediate families, there being no invitations issued. Following a wedding supper at the Valentine home, Mr. and Mrs. Burlingame departed for New York, from which place they will sail on Saturday for Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Curtin entertained at Curtin on Monday evening in honor of the bride.

Cowfer—Crain.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the Free Methodist parsonage, Gearhartville, Ssturday evening, January 17, when Horace Greely Cowfer, son of J. T. Cowfer, of Port Matilda, was united in the hold bonds of matrimony to Miss Alice Crain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Crain, of Sandy Ridge. Rev. F. W. Parks performed the ceremony. Following the happy nuptial event the young couple returned to Sandy Ridge, where they will remain for a short time with the bride's parents, and where the groom is employed.

Williams—Eisenhuth.

Nosh Harold Williams and Miriam Elizabeth Eisenhuth, both of State College, were united in matrimony Saturday afternoon by Rev. J. F. Bruch, at Lock Haven. They will make their home in WilkesBarre.

Three Cents a Day

—just three cents. Almost too small to think about. Yet three cents a day will you and your family if you are in a "Preferred" occupation;

ÆTNA-IZE

—it will give your wife from $1,250 to $3,250 if you are accidentally killed;

—it will provide a weekly income if you are disabled by an accident;

—it will pay $250 at once in case of natural death.

The Ten Dollar Combination Policy

—the best thing insurance offers. In addition to the benefits named above, there are also many others, covering injuries and disabilities. Think of it—a policy that includes both accident and life insurance—at three cents a day.

KILL 7,778 DEER IN 1924

4,000 Fewer Wild Turkeys Bagged by Hunters Than in 1923.

Kill of deer and black bears in 1924 was the largest Pennsylvania ever had, Seth E. Gordon, secretary of the game commission, announced at Harrisburg. The kill of deer was 7,778 compared with 6,452 in 1523 and of bears 929 compared with 500 in 1923. Only ten elk were killed last year compared with 23 in 1923, while Mr. Gordon estimated the total number of wild turkeys bagged at approximately 2,200 compared with 6,048 in 1923.

Reports received showed fatal hunting accidents numbered 45 or ten less than the year previous, while non-fatal accidents were placed at 105, compared with 106 in 1923.

In addition to the kill of legal deer more than 200 bucks under the minimum legal limit for spikes were killed and almost 300 does were killed illegally. More than 100 does were killed during the special doe season in Huntingdon and Mifflin counties.
